John M. Belk, president of Belk Stores, and Thomas M. High Schools Conduct Mock Elections

(Continued from Page 1) David Page, who initiated the idea at East Southern Pines High school, explained that it was not "a contest to see who can yell the loudest, but rather a program to get students interested in the election issues and not the personalities involved."

Going on in his explanation, Page said that modern voting has become increasingly complicated, and that in order for a person to make the right selection, one must stay continuously apprised of each candidate and all the issues in order to cast an intelligent vote. He further stated that the intention of the mock election also was to teach the students something about the mechanics of elections and voting procedures.

Students Active
During the two weeks of a campaigning, which was conducted with much enthusiasm, students promoted their candidates during the lunch hour and after school. Many made posters while others canvassed the student body in an effort to win votes for his candidate.

As in the case in "grown up" elections, students must have been registered before they were allowed to cast their ballots. For this purpose, registrars were appointed and each "political party" was required to have two poll watchers and two vote-counters each.

Before "election day" each voter was instructed about the mechanics of voting a split and straight ticket.

Rally Held Monday
Climaxing the campaign effort at East Southern Pines was a "political rally" at Weaver Auditorium at which two representatives were allowed to talk for each of the two parties.

Speaking in behalf of the Johnson-Humphrey ticket were Becky Austin and Gerry Gilmore. Those speaking for the Goldwater-Miller ticket were Charles Phillips, Jr. and Janice Campbell.

In her talk supporting the Democratic team, Becky Austin said the "people" should choose the well-qualified leaders in order that the American ideal and an honorable peace might be preserved. She said the Goldwater-Miller ticket proposed a "peculiar experiment" in government administration.
