

AT COUNTY CONVENTION

Court Clerk Candidate To Be Chosen Saturday

Newly elected chairmen and vice-chairmen of Moore's 19 precincts, composing, with eight officers, the Moore County Democratic Executive Committee, face a large responsibility Saturday.

Holding its biennial meeting following the county Democratic convention set for 2 pm at the courthouse, the executive committee will choose a candidate for clerk of superior court.

Their selection, replacing the late C. Carlton Kennedy on the party ticket, without opposition in either the primary or general election, will assume this important office for a four-year term. If long county tradition is followed, and if he does a satisfactory job, he will have the office for life.

COUNTY SYSTEM 'Head Start' To Operate Again In 9 Schools

The Moore County Board of Education, in cooperation with the Sandhills Community Action Program, Inc. (SCAP), will sponsor a Head Start program again this summer.

An eight-week program was conducted last year, with over 400 pre-school children. This year's program is expected to be larger and will offer many additional services. Medical and dental treatment will be provided, and funds will be included in the budget for purchasing eye glasses, the announcement said.

T. H. Lingerfelt, principal of Farm Life School, will direct this summer's Head Start program. Plans include 27 classes, at nine different centers. The centers will be in the elementary schools at: Aberdeen, Cameron, Carthage, Farm Life, High Falls, Westmoore, Robbins, Vass-Lakeview, and West End.

Parents intending to send their children to the Head Start program are urged to enroll their children with the principal of each school.

CITIZENS URGED TO GIVE BLOOD

Residents of the Pinehurst and Aberdeen areas and all other interested Moore County citizens were urged this week by Col. John Dibb, Moore County blood program chairman, to give blood at two collections to be made next week: in the high school gym at Pinehurst, Monday, May 16, noon to 5:30 pm; and at the First Baptist Church, Aberdeen, Tuesday, May 17, 11 am to 4:30 pm.

At the end of April, the chairman said, Moore County was 185 to 200 pints short of equaling the amount of blood used by patients in the county's two hospitals which are both supplied by the American Red Cross blood center in Charlotte.

Goal of the county program is to provide through donations at least as much blood as the hospitals use, he explained. A bloodmobile from the center, under medical supervision, will make the collections next week.

revisions they had recommended. It is a companion piece to the zoning ordinance adopted by the council after a long public hearing last Friday night, spelling out regulations for orderly development both within the town limits and in the mile-wide perimeter area.

Zoning Requests

The zoning ordinance, of which a map showing all 10 residential, commercial and industrial zones is an integral part, drew a number of criticisms and requests for changes from an attorney, Harry Fulenwider—representing clients and also speaking his own mind — and from others as individuals, at the Friday hearing.

Some of the changes were approved that night and action was not taken on others, pending consultation with adjoining landowners and other investigation.

The zoning law provides channels by which the petitioning landowners can come back with their requests. On some of the matters, the council can take action directly by amending the new ordinance, after their information is obtained.

A detailed report on the hearing is being crowded out of today's Pilot by lack of space. Questions raised at the zoning hearing will be reviewed by The Pilot next week.

On Tuesday night, the subdivision law was read by Donald W. Bradley, project planner, noting revisions proposed in a meeting of the interested groups, which he had approved, and other changes in wording, sentence structure, etc., for clarification of the meaning.

One point of discussion was left unresolved, that of a 100-foot buffer zone required for (Continued on Page 8)

BY LIGHT FREEZE

Tobacco Plants Might Be Hurt

An unseasonable freeze Tuesday night caused fears in this area for the tobacco crop, but apparently the Sandhills peach crop came through unscathed.

The thermometer dipped officially to 31 in and around Southern Pines, and was also reported at 31 early Wednesday at West End. Clyde Auman, veteran peach grower, said the peaches did not freeze, as if they had "not would have turned black inside." The size of hickory-nuts now, they can't take much cold, he said, but took this and "can take anything now predicted." The trees are loaded and the fruit is having to be heavily thinned.

With tobacco growers just having set out their plants during the past week or so, fears were felt that the young plants might have suffered harm.
