AT FT. BRAGG

Local Man New Corps Sgt. Major

Sgt. Maj. Albert H. Rowe of Oak Drive, a paratrooper combat veteran of World War II, has been designated XVIIIth Airborne Corps sergeant major, corps headquarters at Fort Bragg announced last week.

He was appointed by the corps and the Fort Bragg commander, Lt. Gen. Bruce Palmer Jr., to fill the vacancy created by Sgt. Maj. Darius D. Grogg. Grogg has been commissioned an Army Reserve captain and assigned to active duty with the 269th Aviation Battalion.

Sgt. and Mrs. Rowe have three children: John A., 17, of the home; Benjamin, 23, of Corpus Christi, Texas, and Mrs. Nancy (Gary C.) Cameron, 19, of Pinehurst.

Rowe was named to the corps position after serving since August 16, 1965, as sergeant major of the 82nd Airborne Division, his World War II outfit. He made combat jumps on D-Day in the invasion of Normandy and at Nijmegen, Holland.

He enlisted in the Army in April, 1943, after three months of basic combat and jump training at Camp Wheeler, near Macon, Ga. He was assigned to the Third Battalion of the 82nd's 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment then in a staging area at Cooksland, Ireland. He joined the unit's headquarters company 81 mm mortar section.

CLASSIC MONOPLANES' PUBLISHED

Aberdeen Flyer's Second Book On Sale; Four More 'In Works'

Page Shamburger's "Classic Monoplanes" went on sale the other day.

She had little time to celebrate the occasion, however, as she had to stay on her typewriter at her Aberdeen home to work on four more books—practically simultaneously—and her day-to-day writing of magazine stories about flying.

She also is keeping a bag packed and a weather eye out for any hurricane which might be headed for the United States. She has Defense Department clearance to fly in a Navy hurricane-hunting plane next time a big blow shapes up. Miss Shamburger took a trip with the Air Force about a year ago to gather story material, flying with the crew into the eye of Hurricane Betsy off Puerto Rico. She was the first woman to stand eyeball to eyeball with a hurricane in that fashion.

Shortly after returning from the Betsy visits, she was presented with an award by the Man Will Never Fly Memorial Society. (She is a charter and still-active member of this tongue-in-cheek group.) She won the award, a society spokesman told her, for being a traitor to the society's cause—by coming out of the hurricane alive.

"Classic Monoplanes," a slick-paper paperback, describes the evolution of the monoplane to its present form. The book is dedicated to Miss Shamburger's first flight instructor Harold Bachman, still living in Southern Pines.

He was co-owner of the Skyline Airport near here when he started giving her flight training in 1945. She took lessons from him for two years. Since then she has collected these titles: Winner of the Beechcraft class of the 1955 Women's International Air Race from Washington to Havana; and winner of the New England women's race about six years ago.

Two years ago President Johnson appointed her to the Women's Advisory Committee on Aviation for the Federal Aviation Agency.

Bachman also contributed several of the photos which appear in "Classic Monoplanes," which was published by Crown Publishers, New York.

Charles Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" naturally gets attention in Miss Shamburger's book, since "Spirit" is a monoplane. At the same time the book has Miss Shamburger making the first authoritative denial that "Spirit" was the breed of plane it has always been described as being.

The Lindbergh craft is not a Ryan monoplane, Miss Shamburger said.

SCULPTURE SHOW NOW AT GALLERY

On view at the Library Gallery is an exhibit of sculpture in wood and metal by Bob McDonald of Charlotte.

Unusually appealing in its variety and charm is this small collection of the weekend work of this landscape architect-sculptor. A wood-carver, he uses a chain-saw for his grotesque effects. The jungle gods, kings, Kochinas he has created out of heavy, round pieces of tree-trunks, glower and grin from the corner of the gallery and patio, while the whole place is lit by the softly gleaming brass delicacy of his work in metal—"Chimes," "City of Spires" and candelabra-like designs.

The exhibit will be on view until November 4.

Council Approves Rezoning Of Area To Resident-Farm

The Southern Pines Town Council Tuesday night approved an amendment to the municipal zoning ordinance changing to residential-agricultural classification some land adjacent to "horse country" already zoned residential agricultural.

The action was taken on a Planning Board recommendation to rezone the affected properties from their present class of residential single-family.

The borders of the area affected run like this:

- From the corner of Sheldon Road and Shields Street on Shields to Ridge Avenue.
- On Ridge Avenue to Braden Street.
- On Braden to Petty Street.
- On Petty to Yadkin Road.
- On Sheldon to Shields.

The Planning Board made the recommendation last month on the request of John Dawson, who owns about five acres in the affected area. The board included properties amounting to about five city blocks in the area, in recommending the amendment.

Dawson bought the property and established a horse stable on it before the present zoning ordinance was enacted last May. Under the new ordinance, Dawson was not permitted to build an extension to his stable or a fenced retaining track within his property as he had planned, because his property was in the residential single family zone. Agricultural activities and facilities are banned in that zone. The residential agricultural zone ordinance permits agricultural pursuits and, under stated set-back limits, construction of associated structures. However, the ordinance also sets area limits in the zone to a minimum 200,000 square feet—about five acres where agricultural pursuits are planned. For example, construction would not be permitted on a lot of only one acre.

Dawson told the council that roads separate all sides of his property from other land so (Continued on Page 6)

Fire Damages WSP School Gymnasium

A fire did about $1,700 damage to the gymnasium of West Southern Pines School early Tuesday, the Southern Pines Volunteer Fire Department reported.

The blaze was extinguished within 45 minutes after two fulltime and 15 of the 19 volunteer firemen on the department rolls arrived at the brick and cinder block building on South Carlisle Avenue.

H. A. Wilson, principal of the school, said the damage would not interfere with gymnasium activities. He said most of the damage was done to lumber owned by Maple Flooring Co. of Charlotte, which was putting a new floor on the gym.

Wilson said the blaze was discovered by a teacher, E. T. Clark. Clark saw the fire about midnight from his home on West New York Avenue. He telephoned the principal, and the principal telephoned the fire department.

The damage estimate was made by Fire Chief Pete C. Rapatas.

If the alarm had come in five minutes later, Fireman (Continued on Page 6)

Fire Drills, Parade Mark Local Program

Fire drills, a school slogan contest, poster displays and a Friday parade mark the local observance of National Fire Prevention Week this week by the Southern Pines Volunteer Fire Department.

Firemen J. F. Frye, in charge of the arrangements for the observance, reported this week that the parade will start at 4 pm at the town park and be held on Broad Street.

Junior fire marshals, volunteer firemen, high school bands and town fire fighting equipment are among the people and units who will compose the parade.

The winners of the contest to write the best slogan about fire safety will be announced either before or after the parade, Frye said. Merchants are donating prizes for the students who place first, second and third. The contest is for students of the East and West Southern Pines schools and St. Anthony of Padua School in the fifth through eighth grades.

Also during the weeklong observance, fire drills were scheduled for the town public schools and St. Anthony's today and Thursday.

A movie, "In Case Of Fire," will be shown in the schools Thursday.

Open House will be held at the Fire Department on Thursday and Friday, from 8 am till 5 pm.

The junior fire marshal program, for students in the third and fourth grades, is sponsored by Hobbs Insurance Agency.
