The Moore County estimated | left in suspension when the budget for 1968-69, totalling a all-day special meeting last week ended, to be wrapped up at another meeting to be held Thursday of this week. Changes within the individual budgets may still be made during the 20-day inspection period.

The budget, up nearly $300,-000 from last year's total of $2,355,985, is based on a property valuation of $110 million (fair market value with 60 per cent assessment ration) compared with last year's $100 million. Part of the increase in amount of the budget is due to the tax rate increase of 15 cents, from the $1.25 rate of the past two years.

School expenses are the argest single budgetary item -$838,905 for current expense, $325,000 fcr capital outlay (new construction and major alterations;, and $256,400 for debt service (payment of principal and interest on school bonds).

Summaries of some of the departmental budgets are on the front page of Section 3 of To Be Asked today's Pilot.

The commissioners completed their action on the new budget earlier this year than in most recent years. They have until July 28, under the law, to act on its final adoption but, in any case, the budget must receive preliminary approval and be placed on public inspection no later than 20 days prior to July 28. This is the action that was taken last week.
