Carolina Soap and Candle Move Works to Oshkosh

The Carolina Soap & Candle Co. will be moved to Oshkosh, Wis., sometime within the coming year, but will continue to operate in Southern Pines "at least until the end of 1972," according to an announcement made Tuesday to the employees by company officials.

Dr. Monroe Is Honored At UNC-CH

Hal Goucher, subsidiary president of Lenox, Inc., of Trenton, N. J., which bought the locally owned company in January 1970, and F. M. Gallagher, corporate controller, made the announcement, made a one-day visit, to make the announcement.

Dr. Clement R. Monroe of Pinehurst was among five persons who received Distinguished Service Awards from the University of North Carolina School of Medicine in special ceremonies last Wednesday night in Chapel Hill.

They said the move was occasioned by the phenomenal success of the company, which must be expanded, and that expansion is more economically feasible in Oshkosh, where they have three other plants, than in Southern Pines.

They said the announcement was made as early as possible in view of the good relationship which had existed with the Town and its people and the high esteem in which they hold their local employees, numbering around 175. They said they wanted to allow all the time they could for the adjustment to the move, and had offered employment in Oshkosh to any of their employees here who want to make the move.

George Kecatos, former plant manager of Carolina Soap & Candle Co., has gone to a new position at Moore Memorial Hospital, and was replaced a week ago by E. A. Heiner, who came here from Trenton.

Mrs. Pitts Found Dead By Gunshot

Mrs. Patricia Pitts, 22, was found dead Tuesday evening, with a gunshot wound in her chest, in her mobile home in the Country Acres Trailer Court near Aberdeen.

Coroner A. B. Parker said a 22-cal. foreign-made pistol was found on the bed beside her. A note was also found, but its contents were not disclosed. Her little girl, about 18 months old, was in the trailer with her, but was taken home by friends, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moon of the Raeford Road, who discovered the body and notified Sheriff C. G. Wimberly about 8 p.m. Parker said Mrs. Pitts had apparently been dead about a half hour when found.

Incumbent Senator Everette Jordan brought his campaign to Aberdeen, Southern Pines, and surrounding areas Monday.

While in the area, he spoke to students at Sandhills Community College. Among the senator's recent statements to the press was an answer to the statement of Nick Galiafanakis that he was possibly trying to hold the seat for someone else. He said, "I want to get it over and get it over good, I'm running for six years and expect to serve it out."

Pinehurst Will Host Physicians

Physicians from across North Carolina attending the 118th annual State Medical Society meeting here in Pinehurst on May 20-24 will focus on some of the most compelling topics in Medicine today: Innovations in surgical management, plans for health care of the future and how patients can escape from drug addiction.

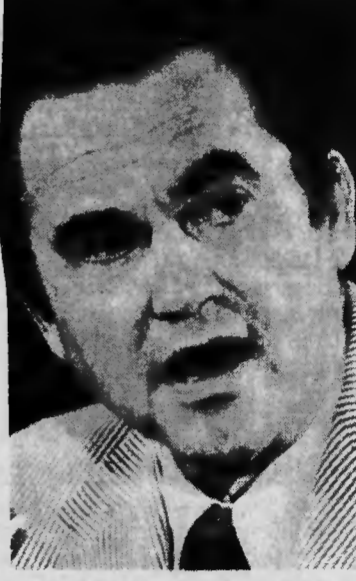

The first meeting of the House of Delegates, always a highlight, will convene at 2 p.m. on Sunday. The House of Delegates is the policy-making body of the State Society.

THE PILOT LIGHT

SANFORD—The Terry Sanford campaign for President picked up steam last week with the endorsement of Governor Bob Scott and former Governor Luther Hodges.

WALLACE—Terry Sanford is not under-estimating the strength of Alabama Governor George Wallace in North Carolina. He knows that Wallace ran second in the presidential race of 1968, picking up about 32 percent of the total vote.

Last week Sanford said that he realized that Wallace has support not only in Eastern Carolina but all over the state. He hopes, however, that vigorous campaigning on his own part the final days before the primary on Saturday will cut away the Wallace support.

CONTENDERS—Main challengers in North Carolina's first Presidential primary are Terry Sanford and George Wallace, pictured here. Shirley Chisholm, who has campaigned here, Henry M. Jackson, and Edmund S. Muskie who decided not to enter, are also on the ballot. President Richard Nixon and Paul N. McCloskey, Jr. are on the Republican Primary ballot.

General Election May 6, 1972

Angus M. Brewer Chairman, Moore County Board of Elections

Weather Skies will be clear to partly cloudy this weekend, so voters can dash out getting wet. So forecasts the weatherman. He says temperatures will be in the low to mid fifties. Rain will continue on and off throughout today with temperatures in the low to upper 70's.

Moore County voters will be faced with nine ballots in the party primary elections on Saturday, May 6.

There's a record number of names on three party primary ballots—Democratic, Republican and American—plus a vote on two state bond issues.

A record number of voters—close to 12,000—also has been predicted. There are 17,484 registered voters in Moore County.

Chairman Angus M. Brewer of the county Board of Elections said that polls would be open Saturday from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. He said all arrangements have been made for voting and the tabulating of returns after the polls have closed.

The Board of Elections met on Monday to certify absentee ballots, permitted this year for the first time in more than 40 years in primary voting. Less than a hundred applications for absentee ballots had been made in the county for the primary.

A runoff election, or second primary, is expected in several races. This election would be held on June 3.

Brewer said that because of the large number of ballots this year that extra boxes had to be constructed. They were made for the Board of Elections by the carpentry class of Union Pines High School.

For the first time in North Carolina there will be a presidential preference primary. On the Republican ballot will be the names of Richard Nixon and Paul N. McCloskey Jr. On the Democratic ballot are the names of Terry Sanford, George Wallace, Shirley Chisholm, Edmund S. Muskie and Henry M. Jackson.

There are six candidates for the Democratic nomination for Governor—H. P. (Pat Taylor), Hargrove (Skipper) Bowles Jr., Wilbur Hobby, Reginald A. (Continued on Page 10-A)

Landfill Is Open

The county's third sanitary landfill, serving the High Falls-Robbins area, opened to the public Monday morning, and the fourth—near West End—is due to open on or about July 1, the Moore County commissioners learned with gratification at their regular meeting Monday.

The new landfill is located off RPR 1484, near Buffalo Creek, about one mile west of the High Falls-Robbins Road. Others are, No. 1, off NC 5 between Aberdeen and Pinehurst, serving the Sandhills area, and No. 2, between Whispering Pines and Niagara, serving those communities as well as Carthage and Union Pines.

The commissioners commended E. Floyd Dunn, chief county sanitarian, on the process made through his arduous and time-consuming labors in selecting and acquiring the sites for the county and getting the landfills staffed, equipped and into operation.

They decried that four landfills, serving most of the county, were enough, and "scratched" a fifth from their plans for the foreseeable future. No. 5, which (Continued on Page 10-A)

United Nations Report The Secretary-General Begins to Speak Out on Vietnam

BY JAMES BOYD Near the beginning of April, 1972, North Vietnam launched a major offensive against South Vietnam with fighting on all fronts. President Nixon immediately responded by increasing the bombing, including the use of giant B-52s hitting Hanoi and Haiphong. Thus once more the world was faced with a war that seemed to have no end. And once more millions of people the world over, including Americans, looked to the United Nations for some kind of response and action. At his first press conference on 10 February, 1972, Secretary-General Waldheim took an almost neutral stand on the war saying in effect that the only useful role he saw for the United Nations would come after the battle was over in an effort to rebuild the shattered country through "reconstruction and rehabilitation". Since that time, negotiations came to a halt in Paris because the United States felt there was no use to continue the talks until the other side showed a willingness to negotiate. Several weeks later came the sudden massive escalation by North Vietnam. The Secretary-General was in Paris at the time on an official visit, at the invitation of the French Government. After a talk with President Pompidou on April 7, during which the worsening situation in Vietnam was discussed, he reported to the press that "we are always ready to offer our good offices if the parties concerned, all the parties concerned, so wish. This is an absolutely essential precondition. I think that there is not much of an opportunity for the United Nations for the time being." But he added, in answer to a question as to whether the United Nations could take the initiative that "this will depend on future developments." This statement about a willingness to use "good offices" was headlined in all European papers. Thus the Secretary-General was surprised, on returning to New York, to learn that there had been almost no mention of his offer in the United States. In the meantime, the situation on the ground and the air in Vietnam had vastly changed, facing the Nixon Administration with various critical alternatives, none of which offered an easy or attractive solution. Consequently, the Secretary-General called a press briefing on April 25, 1972 ostensibly to report on his trip to France, England and Latin America but in fact as a way to continue to voice his concern about the increasingly dangerous situation in Vietnam. For the first time in his four months in office, he became almost aggressive, voice rising in pitch, fists pounding the table as he hammered out his views. This was no passive, neutral civil servant waiting for nations to come to him. Mr. Waldheim was prepared to take action "whether the parties like it or not." "I made my position clear in Paris and in London," the Secretary General said strongly, face reddening. "I said that I deeply regret the new outbreak of hostilities in that area and that this problem, in my opinion, can only be solved through negotiations. I shall not fail to repeat this opinion whenever the situation arises. ...I also offered my good offices to all parties concerned...the good offices of the U. N....and I shall go on offering good offices whether the parties like it or not (here he pounded the table with his fist). I can tell you this in all frankness. Perhaps some of you are thinking: well he is so naive that he is making a proposal of this kind? He should know that it will not be accepted. Well, I am not as naive as that, but I think it is my duty to offer good offices because the day will come...when some Governments will say 'why did (Continued on Page 10-A)
