

Pinehurst Order Restrains Certain Building Practices

BY VALERIE NICHOLSON Diamondhead Corp. and Pinehurst, Inc., were temporarily enjoined Wednesday from certain building practices by Judge A. Pilston Godwin, presiding over a special term of Moore Superior Court at Carthage. The judge refused an injunction against the Village Council, upholding the right of the Council to function.

W. T. Covington, Charlotte attorney, said for the defendant corporations that an appeal would be filed as soon as possible. After consultation with the lawyers for both sides, Judge Godwin set bond for the plaintiffs at a total of $110,000, a legal formality to assure payment should the plaintiffs fail in their suit, and damage result. William Naughton, of Mountsideside, N. J., vice-president and controller of Diamondhead, whose corporate officers are there, had testified for the defense that the preliminary injunctions would cost Diamondhead $400,000 to $500,000 if sustained for as long as 90 days, and could cost $1 million or more if sustained much longer than that.

However, he said these losses could be regained in increased construction, if and when the injunctions should be lifted. Allowing 60 days for filing the appeal, and 20 days for plaintiffs to respond, Judge Godwin said he felt it was of the utmost importance for the case to be resolved quickly, and he hoped to see it reach trial before the appeal gets into court. With the next regular civil term in Moore not due until January 21, and with this case likely to take up a

Mental Health Home Here To Be State Pilot Project

The Sandhills area has been selected as the first site in what may become a statewide mental health program for children. Duncraig Manor, a residential treatment facility for children with emotional problems, will open in Southern Pines in October. The home, one of three such projects funded by the General Assembly, will operate under the auspices of three mental health centers: Sandhills Mental Health Center in Pinehurst, Cumberland County Mental Health Center in Fayetteville, and Southeastern Regional Mental Health Center in Lumberton. The second and third homes will open in Fayetteville and the Lumberton area later in the year.

also be located in the home, which is owned by Mrs. Leon Baker. The home will serve children who for the most part are living in their home communities but can benefit from more intensive treatment than can be obtained on an outpatient basis. The length of a child's stay will depend on the individual situation, with provisions for emergency and short-term care as well as long-term treatment. Fees will be based on family resources, and no child will be refused admission for financial reasons. Applications to the home will go through the mental health centers involved, and will be screened by an Advisory Board composed of two staff members from each center.

The Sandhills representatives are Dr. Don Schulte, area director, and George Barbour, psychologist. Mrs. Russell Livermore of Lumberton, whose dedication and hard work were directly

Moore To Be Interested In NC Medical Training

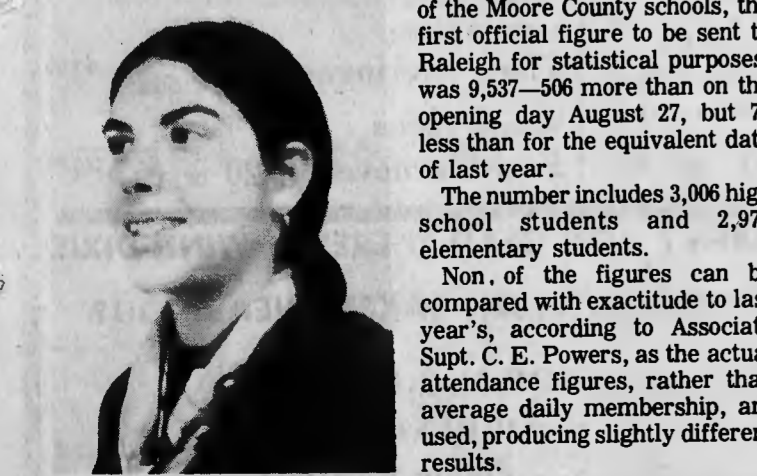

Moore Memorial Hospital will be interested in participating in the State-supported program of physician training if the statewide plan submitted to the UNC Board of Governors last week is adopted. Dr. William F. Hollister, chief of staff at Moore Memorial, said this week that the hospital "would be very much interested" in taking part in the educational program outlined in the 285-page report. Dr. Hollister thinks, however, that "we should get our expansion program underway" before moving into a full-scale clinical training and hospital residency program.

Waste Disposal Program Gets Under Way in Moore

The placing of 100 solid waste containers around Moore County began on Monday and the county commissioners hope that they will go a long way toward cleaning up the area. It was also announced by the County Planning Office that beginning Oct. 1 the use of landfills operated by the county will be free to all citizens of Moore for domestic and commercial waste. The commissioners have contracted with Liebers Sanitation Service to place the four cubic yard containers and operate the waste collection service. The containers are to be used primarily for household garbage.

Homecoming Set Sunday At Bethesda

The annual homecoming for historic Old Bethesda Presbyterian Church located near Aberdeen will be held Sunday, Sept. 30. Dr. Ben Lacy Rose, a past Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly and pastor of the Wrightsville Beach Presbyterian Church, will be the homecoming speaker at the service beginning at 11:15 a.m.

Oil Crisis Will Last Some Time

Two major oil dealers in Moore County say the present fuel crisis will last many months; but that a mild winter can be easily survived without undue discomfort. Ralph Chandler of Sandhills Oil Co., has just returned from a N. C. Oil Jobbers convention in Williamsburg, Va., where a top official of Amoco and another from Union Oil were speakers. Chandler said both men predicted a continuing energy shortage for many months.

Schools Show Drop In Students

The 10-day attendance figure of the Moore County schools, the first official figure to be sent to Raleigh for statistical purposes, was 9,537—506 more than on the opening day August 27, but 70 less than for the equivalent date of last year. The number includes 3,006 high school students and 2,973 elementary students. Non. of the figures can be compared with exactitude to last year's, according to Associate Supt. C. E. Powers, as the actual attendance figures, rather than average daily membership, are used, producing slightly different results.

Air Service Will Resume On Oct. 15

When Pinehurst Airlines resumes scheduled operations on Monday, October 15, there will be the three previously scheduled weekday flights between Southern Pines-Pinehurst airport and the two nearest principal gateway stations of Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham. Plans are in progress to add to this schedule non-stop service to Washington's National Airport, with the expectation that this will

Powell Bill Funds Given For Streets

Powell Bill money for street work totaling $192,340.20 will be coming into Moore County towns this week. It's a record amount, not only for Moore but for the entire State—$29.2 million in North Carolina as a whole.

Hodgkins Returns Here With First Union Bank

Norris L. Hodgkins, Jr. will assume the position of city executive for First Union National Bank in Southern Pines on October 1, according to an announcement made today by Bruce W. Riley, Regional Executive Vice President. Hodgkins will replace Michael Curry who will become city executive for First Union in Burlington-Graham-Mebane. Hodgkins has been serving as city executive for First Union in Durham since February, 1969. Prior to that he had been city executive for First Union in Southern Pines from the time of its merger with the Citizens Bank & Trust Company of Southern Pines in September, 1967.

He stated "It is with deep feeling of personal regret that I leave Foxfire, its fine employees and my personal friends and majority stockholders of Foxfire, Mr. Roland McKenzie and Mr. Dan Thomason." General Donovan is joining Riddle Industries of Fayetteville

Vass Election

Mayor D. Hugh McLean and other incumbents on the Vass Town Board are running unopposed in the only town election not held by the county. Voters in Vass will go to the Fire Station to cast their ballots October 9. All other town elections will be held Nov. 6.

The incumbents include Mayor McLean, G. M. Blue, A. G. Edwards Jr., James Key, C. P. McMillan and C. L. Tyson.

United Fund Goal Set; Connolly Heads Drive

Thomas Connolly will head the 1973-74 United Fund campaign in Moore County, which will be launched Oct. 15 and has a goal of $100,115. Michael B. Curry, president of the United Fund of Moore County, announced this week. The campaign is conducted to provide the funds needed to operate 23 public agencies serving various needs of Moore County residents during 1974, Curry explained. Contributions and pledges will be sought from individuals, commercial and industrial organizations and other sources.

Ewing Elected Chairman Of Moore's Republicans

The new chairman of Moore County Republicans is Robert S. Ewing of Southern Pines, a county commissioner and editor and publisher of the Moore County News at Carthage. He was elected at the county convention held Saturday in Carthage. There were two other candidates, one of whom was David Drexel of Southern Pines, but both withdrew and Ewing was elected unanimously. Ewing has served as county chairman before and also has been State Treasurer of the Republican party. Other officers elected to the executive committee were Dawn Leland of Whispering Pines, vice chairman; Garda Simpson, secretary; and M. C. Conway of Whispering Pines, treasurer. The convention also voted to increase the executive com-

Three Nabbed In Break-In Of Offices

Quick work by sheriff's officers this past weekend resulted in the recovery of more than $3,000 worth of equipment stolen from the new Dental Office building on Highway 15-501 and the arrest of three persons on charges of breaking and entering and larceny. Sheriff C.G. Wimberly said those arrested on Sunday and being held under $3,000 bond each for appearance in District

REPORT—When the statewide plan for medical education comes up for a vote Thursday by the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina it will not be unanimously accepted.

A divided vote is expected, but a majority will probably vote to accept the report of the special consultants, and there isn't much doubt that University officials will be authorized to proceed with implementation of the plan. A counter-attack from East Carolina University partisans is also expected, but some of the ECU supporters in the General Assembly seem to be backing away from what appeared to be a well-oiled plan to establish a four-year medical school at Greenville. It's entirely possible, of course, that a new medical school may eventually be established at East Carolina, but the belief is that the priorities and timetable advanced in the special report will be followed. REFERENDUM — Persons working for the N. C. Citizens for Choice and Control say they are having a hard time getting across the fact that people will not be voting for or against liquor-by-the-drink in the Nov. 6 referendum. The issue is whether local option will decide the mixed drink question. "It's simply a matter of allowing local communities to decide for themselves," a spokesman said. Council Supports Option Plan; Endorses N.C. Wilderness Area

Members of the North Carolina Travel Council, meeting at Pinehurst the past weekend, reaffirmed their support of the mixed beverage local option plan and adopted a resolution in favor of the Joyce Kilmer Forest-Slick Rock wilderness area. Some 120 members of the Council registered for the two-day convention, which opened Friday and closed with a "Carolina Moon Party" Saturday night. President Arthur M. Flynn of Greensboro presided over the meetings, which heard discussions on how best to promote tourism and Tar Heel travel promoters were told how it is done in Virginia, South Carolina and Alabama. Putting themselves on the side of the environmentalists in the controversy over the wilderness area, the Council went on record as favoring the 15,000-acre area in Western Carolina. In endorsing the Western Wilderness Bill, it pointed to the need for more open spaces for recreation and urged the State's senators and representatives in congress to support the bill.

At the present time the bill has the support of Senator Sam Ervin, but is opposed by Senator Jesse Helms. At the Friday night dinner meeting John Ryan, chairman of the N. C. Citizens for Choice and Control said tourism in this State has not reached its potential and
