Calvary Banquet Held In Raleigh

The juniors and seniors of Calvary Christian School enjoyed the festivities of their annual Junior-Senior banquet held on Saturday at the Velvet Cloak in Raleigh.

Students, teachers, school board members, and friends dined poolside amidst tall ferns and hanging baskets at individual wrought iron tables. A yellow and white color scheme was used for the decorations. The buffet included beef bourguignon, exotic vegetables and salads, and a wide range of desserts.

The program that followed dinner was designed for the entertainment of the juniors and seniors in particular. The Calvary staff put on a series of skits, monologues, and various other types of musical entertainment.

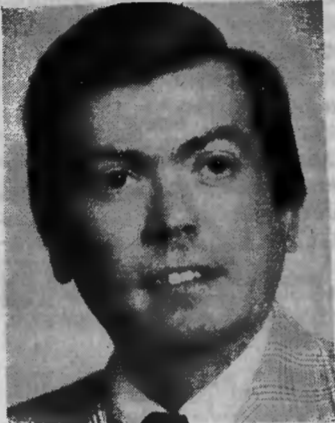

The graduating seniors received senior gifts from Principal Dwight Creech, Barbara Morton, Calvary's only woman graduate, received a gold bracelet, while the male graduates received silver engraved, initialed keychains.

A special photographer was on hand to take photographs of junior and senior couples in the picturesque atmosphere around the indoor pool.

The junior prophecies and the seniors wills were read, much to the amusement of all attending.

Pastor Kent Kelly ended the banquet with an address to juniors and seniors and a few pertinent remarks. The evening was closed with prayer.

Seven Seniors Graduate At Calvary Christian

Seven seniors from Calvary Christian School attended graduation ceremonies in their honor on Sunday, June 14, at 7:30 p.m. at Calvary Memorial Church.

Approximately 275 parents, teachers, and friends were in attendance. Michael Bachman and Keith Bobbit led the procession, bearing the Christian flag and the United States flag, they were followed by the seniors, dressed in crimson gowns, and wearing caps with white tassels.

Directly following the opening hymn and prayer, Mrs. Sally Davis offered special music.

The graduation was presented by Pastor Kent Kelly, pastor of Calvary Memorial Church and administrator of Calvary Christian School. He addressed graduates concerning their need to continue their education and the importance of having "the desire to know." He cautioned them that the world was not filled with algebra and physics tests but with other kinds of tests—like the tests of living for Christ and displaying a good Christian character. He called on them not to place themselves in competition with others in the world but to compete with the abilities God had given them. He urged them to be the best they could be, at whatever their hands found to do, and to stay in the will of God. Pastor Kelly thanked parents for their interest in Christian education and their support through many court decisions. He reminded them also that those court decisions had been in favor of Christian schools.

Principal Dwight Creech,

Group Seeks Public Support For Schools At Budget Meet

A grass roots group has initiated a campaign to encourage citizen participation at the Monday, June 22, public hearing on the Moore County budget for 1981-82.

The focus of attention is the public school budget, which faces a $600,000 current expense reduction over the present year's budget.

Speaking on behalf of the group, Dr. James Wallace, his wife, Nicky Wallace, and Cynthia McFadden, issued this statement:

"We want to urge everyone to attend the budget public hearing Monday night and become a part of the budget-making process.

"The proposed budget cuts—the four library assistants, for example—could place our accreditation with the Southern Association in jeopardy. It is also likely that the state will lower our accreditation rating, now the highest possible in North Carolina."

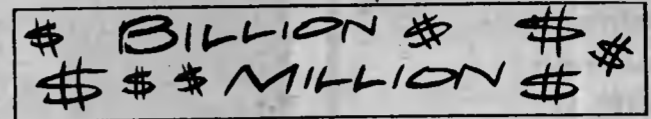

Mrs. Wallace is a member of the Southern Pines Middle School Advisory Council, and Mrs. McFadden is president of the Southern Pines Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association.

They told The Pilot that their efforts are informal and strictly separate from partisan politics.

Through telephone calls and other personal contact, the group is notifying parents and other citizens interested in a quality school system and asking them to show their concern by attending the budget hearing.

The hearing, which is required by law, will be held in the courtroom of the old courthouse in Carthage, beginning at 7:30 p.m. The county budget for 1981-82 cannot legally be adopted until after the hearing is held. The budget goes into effect July 1.

GRILLED TURKEY

If your family enjoys turkey cooked on an outdoor covered grill, try these suggestions from Rachel Kinlaw, extension food specialist, North Carolina State University.

For a hickory-smoked flavor, sprinkle a half cup of dampened hickory chips over the coals during the last half hour of cooking.

Or, for a bit of flair, brush the turkey with a favorite barbecue sauce during the last half hour of cooking. This will give the turkey added flavor and gloss.
