EVERYBODY.

There was a clergyman who married a coupie, and at the wedding breakfast one of the bridesmaids expressed a wish to see that mystic document, a wedding license, which she had never beheld in her lifetime. There mest occasioned a fearful discovery. The elergyman had quite forgotten to ask for a license; the bride groom had left it to his "best man" to procure it, and this the best man" had forgotten to do. Of course the marriage was no legal marriage at all. The wedding party broke up in dismay, and the ceremony was performed again next day. The poor clergyman, however, never got over the effects of his

As for the men, they commit all kin is of blunders and bunglings. Thave known a man, at that very nervous and trying moment, follow the clergyman within the communion rail and prepare to take a place opposite him. I have known a man, when the min ster stretched out his hand to unite those of the couple, take it vigorously in his own and give it a hearty shake. Sometimes more serious difficulties occur. Some ladies have had an almost unconquerable reluctance to use the word "obey;" one or two, if their own statements are to be accepted, have ingentously construed the word "nobey." The word, however, has still to be formally admitted into the language. There was one girl, who was being mar-ried by a very fine old clergyman, who absolutely refused to utter the "obey." The minister suggested that, if she was unwilling to utter the word aloud she should whisper It to him; but the young lady refused even this kind of compromise. Further, however, than this the clergyman refused to accomodate her; but when he was forced to dismiss them all without proceeding any further, the recalcitrant young person consented to "obey."

The difficulty, however, is not always made on the side of the lady. On one occasion the bridegroom wished to deliver a little oration qualifying his vow, and describing in what sense and to what extent he was using the words of the formula. He was, of course, given to understand that nothing of this kind could be per-

When the bridegroom has returned thanks, after the parson's speech, in these days of feminiue orstory, there is sometimes a tendency on the part of the bride to make a little speech of her own. "I call you all to witness," said a bride within our hearing, "that I have no in-tention of obeying." "Ah madam," said Frederic Denison Maurice, who was present, "you have yet to learn the bloss-The following case was related to me by a bishop of the Church of England: There was a man who had officiated as a clergyman in a large town for about fifteen years. At the lapse of that time it was accidentally discovered that he was au impostor. A new bishop came, or the man went into a new diocese; anyhow, the request came that he would produce his letters of orders. Letters of orders are precious and remarkable documents; if once lost they cannot be replaced. The pseudo clergyman replied, expressing his great regret that in the course of a removal the letters had been hopelessly mislaid, but hoped that the length of time in which he had served in the diocese would be a sufficient voucher. The bishop wrote back to say that he regretted the loss of the letters of orders, and that it would be quite sufficient if he gave exact dates, which would enable him to refer to the diocesan registry. The imposture then became known. Is was a matter of great anxiety to settle what had best be done under such circumstances. Of course a very large number of marriages had been performed during those lifteen years, not one of which was legal. The first suggest a tion was that an act should be passed making these marriages legal. There were objections to this course. It was considered that an immense deal of pain would be caused by the publication of the Levalidity of these marriages, and that peculiar hardship would be done in the case of chilbren where one or both parents had died in the meantime. On a certain evening there was a solemn discussion between the bishop of the diocese and the Home Secretary, the result of which was a communication to the false clergyman that if he left England immediately, and forever, proceedings would not be taken, but that otherwise he would be pros-
