THE KITCHEN.

Make It a Comfortable, Cheery and Convenient Room.

There is no objection to a pretty kitchen or to a girl filling one up with bric-a-brac if she keeps it free from dust. A kitchen to those who do the work in it is the living room, and why should it not be made convenient and pretty?

If the kitchen is a comfortable, cheery room most girls will take a pride in keeping it so. Give them nice paper for the shelves if they wish it and a fancy lamp shade to rest by after the kitchen is tidied up for the night. See, too, that they have convenient utensils to cook with, a good clothes wringer and plenty of clothespins and a good stove. It will pay you well to look after these things in the good, wholesome dishes that will come on to the table well cooked.

Many girls have to do with makeshifts that you would not think possible for yourself to use—a broken wringer, a tub without handles or a wash boiler or teakettle with a rag run through a hole to prevent leaking.

No girl likes to ask for repairs, and oftentimes the mistress is too careless to look well after the little things for her kitchen. Also let the girl's sleeping room be a pleasant, attractive place. Many a horse has better quarters for rest than servants have. Look well to the comfort of the servants. If not appreciative at first they may learn to be so.—New York Journal.

YOUR MOUTH.

Teach It to Smile and Keep Away the Cynical Lines.

It is Ruskin who points out that in the human race alone the mouth is a mark of beauty and may be made to convey a great deal of expression even though the lips are silent.

The curve of a woman's lips can express, oh, so much! There is the proud mouth, the cynical mouth, the sensual mouth, the cruel mouth. Lips that tremble can tell more of grief than many a spoken word. Lips that smile can illuminate a whole household.

As a mode of expression the mouth has ever been a telling factor. As a mark of beauty the mouth can be cultivated. It needs no beauty doctor's art to truth it to pleasant lines. Teach it to smile. Refuse to let it settle into hard, cynical lines. Give it the uplift and serenity that speak more plainly than words of peace and strength, says Home Chat. By deliberate training the mouth can be made one of the most telling, most attractive, features of a personality.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Cold rain water and soap will remove machine grease.

If clothes are hung on the line neatly and smoothly much labor will be saved when the time for ironing comes.

Two potatoes grated in a basin of warm water will give better results than soap in washing delicate flannel or woolen goods, ribbons, etc.

If hooks and eyes have rusted white goods, put the garment into water in which has been dissolved a little cream of tartar and boil for a few minutes.

Beeswax and salt will make rusty flatirons as clean and smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag. When the irons are hot rub them first with the wax rag, then scour with a cloth sprinkled with salt.

When washing black stockings take care that fresh water be used, both for washing and rinsing, and thus avoid having the stockings covered with lint, which is sometimes the case when they are washed in the same water used for white clothes.

The "Temperament" Excuse.

Sometimes you hear a woman offer as an excuse for her faults, "It is my temperament." Do you not know that the perversions of a temperament are not the temperament itself? There never was a temperament that had not its good as well as its evil possibilities. The truth is that we inherit our temperament with its natural perversions, and it is our business in life to shake off the perversions in order that we may find the veritable temperament itself and that it may carry us on truly to the best work that such a temperament can do. If all who have excused themselves for selfishness and evil because of the "artistic temperament" had recognized that they were really excusing the perversions of their temperament and not the temperament itself much needless pain and sorrow might have been avoided.—American Magazine.

Dull Furniture.

Furniture becomes dull not necessarily from wear and tear, but from the action of gases which are in the air at all times. This dullness as well as scratches, bruises and like spots may be done away with. After washing and drying take linseed oil and turpentine in equal parts, mix thoroughly and apply very sparingly on a soft rag, rubbing the spots or one section at a time until the original color is restored, after which you must be sure to wipe off with another entirely clean rag, for if the turpentine and oil be allowed to remain they will amalgamate with the varnish and end in blotches.

Borax.

Borax must be used sparingly as a water softening agent. It is extremely drying. Quite the most delightful beautifier for the purpose of softening the bathing water is lavender lotion. If you use it once you will feel that you must always have it. The formula is most simple: Four ounces of alcohol, one-half ounce of ammonia, one dram of oil of lavender. The alcohol dilutes the ammonia and makes it safe to use, while the lavender gives a most delicious fragrance to the bath.

Anthony Fiala, the arctic explorer, served during the Spanish-American war. He was born near Jersey City about thirty-five years ago, and is believed to be the youngest arctic explorer. When the Ziegler-Baldwin expedition was sent out, he was second in command of it. Mr. Fiala was a chemist, photographer and engraver before he became an explorer.

Dr. Rosen, former Minister to Morocco, having visited Adis Ababa, Abyssinia, where he went as special envoy of Germany to King Menelek, reports that kingdom as being in a feudal condition, the King being the head of both church and state. He reports the monarch as being intellectual and mild, of a conciliatory disposition, supported by occasional severity. The King is true to his word and the feudal chieftains are compelled to obey him. He claims to be descended from Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Spider Chased Man.

A story is told by an explorer of a large and fierce South American spider which chases men if they come too near its lurking places. On one occasion he was pursued by one.

"Riding at an easy trot over the dry grass," he writes, "I observed a spider pursuing me, leaping swiftly along and keeping up with my beast. I aimed a blow with my whip and the point of the lash struck the ground close to it, when it instantly leaped upon and ran up the lash, and was actually within three or four inches of my hand when I flung the whip from me."—London Standard.
