Mrs. Roy Hudson Dead.

On the night of June 12 as the midnight hour was approaching, the Angel of Death visited the home of Mr. Roy Hudson and took from him the spirit of his wife, Lula. She was twenty-one years, seven months and two days old. She leaves a husband, an infant baby, father, mother, sisters, a brother, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Jernigan, of Hood's Grove section. The deceased was buried at the family burying ground near her parents' home. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Charles Strickland.

Oh, it is so lonesome without her! We miss her everywhere, but we must be reconciled to let her live up there. Mourn not, dear friends—our loss is her eternal gain.

It makes heaven nearer and dearer to believe we have a treasure up there who is watching and waiting to welcome us there. Written by A FRIEND, Bentonsville, N. C., Route 2.

WHAT THE DOCTORS THINK OF ALCOHOL

"Whiskey, or any kind of administered alcohol is now known to be a narcotic and depressant and not a stimulant," says Dr. Harvey W. Wiley in the May issue of "Good Housekeeping." He uses the testimony of the doctors of the land to show that there is no demand on the part of the medical profession for beer and light wines to be used as a medicine.

Dr. Wiley said 53,000 physicians were asked, "Do you regard beer as a necessary therapeutic agent in the treatment of medicine?" Seventy-four per cent answered, "No." Asked the same question as to wine, 68 per cent answered, "No."

Only thirteen per cent said they had found it advisable to prescribe beer, while eighty-seven per cent said they had not found it advisable. Only 21 per cent of those who answered the question as to wine said they found it advisable to prescribe it, while 79 per cent said they had not found it advisable.

The survey revealed interesting facts in regard to the larger cities in which beer is manufactured and sold, Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Cincinnati. In Chicago, 91 said they had, and 371 said they had not, found it advisable to prescribe beer. In St. Louis 34 advised the use of beer against 142 to the contrary. In Milwaukee 22 found it advisable and 58 had not found it advisable to prescribe beer. In Cincinnati 9 found it advisable and 99 did not.

"Do you hold a Federal permit?" was answered by 8,622. Of this number 29 per cent said, "Yes," while 61 per cent said, "No." He says it is interesting to note that many of those holding Federal permits live in states whose laws do not permit the use of them, and are holding them to be used if ever legalized. "The replies indicate," says Dr. Wiley, that probably thirty per cent of the practicing physicians of the country are armed with permits.

Dr. Wiley summarizes the situation as he explains that while the school of medicine have taught the fallacy that alcohol is a narcotic, the consensus of opinion now is that "whiskey, or any kind of administered alcohol is now known to be a narcotic and depressant, and not a stimulant."—Christian Observer

Liquor Under the Flag.

The Buschs, of past beer fame, seem to have drawn a fine point on the Shipping Board. The elder Busch went abroad in one of the Board's vessels and manifested astonishment that the ship was allowed to operate a bar and to serve whiskeys—but after leaving the three-mile limit. Chairman Lasker makes frank admission of the liquor traffic, but justifies it on the ground that it is necessary to meet competition of foreign ships. In other words, while whiskey is outlawed in the United States, it is all right for United States shipping organizations, sailing under the flag of a prohibition country, to traffic in the contraband outside of the Government's jurisdiction. It is a far fetched contention that so long as ships flying the foreign flags are allowed to enter and depart our shores as privileged liquor ships, the United States will claim the same privilege.

The sale of whiskey on an American vessel in privileged waters appears an inconsistency. It might be the better policy to make the saloonless vessel so popular an institution that it would draw a custom such as would break down competition. There ought to be enough prohibitionists in the country to make a prohibition-operated Shipping Board Line a profitable investment.—Charlotte Observer.

GOLDSBORO LADY TAKES POISON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, June 14.—Mrs. Rose Lindsey, formerly Miss "Dolly" Williams, of Goldsboro, is said to be dying from bichloride of mercury poisoning at the Emergency hospital here.

Her friends assert she deliberately took the poison after a quarrel with her husband, a native of Georgia, and an overseas veteran.

Lindsey claims that the taking of the deadly dose was an accident.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey live at the Manchester apartment.

Singing the Old Songs.

"Ah for the old days!" sighed the old-fashioned young man. "The girls of today are not at all like our mothers use to be! Why, I'll bet you don't know what needles are for!"

He glanced with admiration at the modern girl. "I do too!" she flashed. "They're for phonographs!"—Wayside Tales.

DEATH FROM SNAKE BITES RARE IN U. S., FIGURES SHOW

Although the average mortality from American venomous snakes is a little more than 10 per cent of the persons bitten, death from snake bites is quite rare, according to the Biological Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, because relatively few persons encounter or are bitten by the dangerous species.

The most venomous of our native snakes live in lonely, little-settled districts, often on stony or swampy land that can not be cultivated. Usually they disappear at the approach of a man, and while they may strike if provoked, the popular belief in respect to the distance they can strike is erroneous. Three-fourths of their own length is about the greatest distance possible. The legs are well protected when one is going into deep woods or places known to be infested by rattlers or other poisonous snakes, there is slight chance of being bitten.

As the food of snakes consists of living prey, they can not be killed by poison baits. The only method thus far devised to kill them seems to be clubbing or shooting. This is best done in early spring, when they are still sluggish after the winter hibernation. Allowing hogs free run of infested land may reduce the number of snakes. However, the popular idea that hogs are immune to snake bite is probably based on the impenetrability by the venomous fangs of their thick skin and fat layer rather than on actual immunity of these animals.

The varieties most commonly found in this country are the Elapidae, or Harlequin snakes, and the Crotalidae, or "pit vipers," which include rattlesnakes, cotton mouth water moccasins, and copperheads.

Florists to Beautify State Fair Grounds.

RALEIGH, June 15.—One of the many new and attractive features of the State Fair this year will be the display of flowering plants, shrubs, and cut flowers in Floral Hall and in beds outside this building in October. The florists of North Carolina will have charge of this display. They have already made arrangements with the Fair association to put on this flower show in October.

The Florists of the North Carolina Florists Association have appointed committees to work out the details of this display of cut flowers, shrubs, bulb plants, and all varieties of flowering plants which bloom in the fall. The building just directly in front of the entrance to the fair grounds will be a place of floral beauty by the time the fair opens. A number of florists have already sent down a large number of bulbs and plants with directions for planting them. In addition to the borders and beds which will be arranged along both sides of the entrance to Floral Hall, some of the florists of the state have arranged to plant flowers along the entrances to the Woman's Building.

Ultimately the fair association hopes to make the fair grounds one of the beauty spots of the state. Flowering plants of all kinds which bloom or reach their maturity in the fall will be bedded at many places in the fair grounds, in accordance with plans that will be made by a landscape gardener. Mrs. Edith Vandenberg, president of the fair this year, is very much interested in this phase of the development of the fair grounds. A substantial beginning along these lines will be shown in the displays of the North Carolina florists next October.

The floral display will be in the octagonal domed part of the Floral Hall, which this year will justify its name with one of the finest collections of North Carolina grown flowers ever exhibited in the state. There will be eight booths around the walls and the center space will also be available for displays.

The florists are making arrangements for a demonstration of the work of the Florist Telegraphic Delivery Association, an international organization of florists through which deliveries of flowers can be made to any part of the United States.

OBITUARY HEAD: "PASSED THROUGH HELL GATE"

Henry Waterson was discussing typographical errors one day. Said he:

"While I've heard of a great many funny typographical breaks in my time, about the oddest and most humorous transposition of types that ever came to my observation was that in a New York paper some years ago. The paper used to print its shipping news on the same page with the obituaries. Imagine the glee with which its readers found the captions changed one morning, a long list of respectable names being set forth under the marine head, 'Passed Through Hell Gate Yesterday.'"—Hertford County Herald.

Capt. Lewis' Confederate Poem Appropos to Reunion.

"This was handed me by one of our Confederate veterans, Capt. J. W. Lewis," said Mrs. Henry Thomas, yesterday, "and think it very appropriate for your page just now, as the veterans are getting ready to go to the reunion at Richmond."

Capt. Lewis gave Mrs. Thomas a copy of a Confederate poem, at the top of which is the flag of the Confederacy—the Stars and Bars.

The poem follows:

Confederate Reunion. Get my knapsack, Mary, And my uniform of gray, Get my battered helmet, Mary, For I'll need them all today. Get my canteen and my leggings. Reach me down my rusty gun, For I'm goin' out paradin' With the boys of '61.

Never mind them blood-stains, Mary, Never mind that ragged hole, It was left there by a bullet That was seeking for my soul. Brush away those cobwebs, Mary, Get my bonny flag of blue, For I'm goin' out paradin' With the boys of '62.

Those old clothes don't fit me, Mary, Like they did when I was young, Don't you remember how neatly To my manly form they clung? Never mind that sleeve that's empty, Let it dangle loose and free, For I'm goin' out paradin' With the boys of '63.

Full that sword belt tighter, Mary, Fix that strap beneath my chin, I've grown old and threadbare, Mary, Like my uniform, and thin, But I reckon I'll pass muster As I did in days of yore, For I'm goin' paradin' With the boys of '64.

Now I'm ready, Mary, kiss me, Kiss your old sweetheart good-bye, Brush away those wayward tears, Lord! I didn't think you'd cry. I'm not goin' forth to battle sakes alive, I'm just goin' out paradin' With the boys of '65.

Soon we'll all be paradin', Mary, In that land beyond the stars, On that bright celestial shore With the good old stars and bars. But before we go, Mary, We'll meet the boys once more, And practice for paradise On that bright and shining shore. —From "One Minute Interviews" page, Charlotte Observer, June 15.

NEGRO PARADERS

Every State in Union Represented by Marchers in Anti-Lynching Program.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—President Harding was not here today to review the "silent negro parade" for the Dyer anti-lynching bill, but the marchers went to the White House just the same. This movement of the colored people is embarrassing the administration. The anti-lynching bill has been pigeonholed for this session, and may never see the light. Senator Borah says it would be declared unconstitutional if enacted. But the negroes of the north and west demand action on it.

Several thousand of them paraded around the Capitol, down Pennsylvania avenue and past the White House in a silent protest against lynching. It was a national as well as a local affair in that every state in the union was represented.

There was no music and no noise of any kind. It was the quietest parade Washington has seen. A platoon of colored policemen from the Washington force led the procession.

Various Masonic and other bodies of colored citizens appeared in uniforms and others in civilian dress. Tots and old persons rode in automobiles. The colored Boy Scouts were out in force. In fact all leading organizations of negroes were represented.

Placards and banners were numerous, all calling for passage of the pending anti-lynching bill or otherwise denouncing lynching.

Quotations from the banners follow:

"The failure of the anti-lynching bill will be a catastrophe to America."

"This nation will have to pay in this generation or the next for the crime of lynching."—H. E. C. Bryant, in Charlotte.

There were 359,839 fewer meat animals slaughtered in the United States under Federal inspection during April this year than last, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture. To this shortage sheep and lambs contributed 301,511, hogs, 57,533, cattle 577, and calves 218.

Profitable and Unprofitable Thinking

A farmer once sent his hired boy to the hen coop to get some eggs for breakfast. After waiting a considerable length of time, he went out to see what had become of the boy. He found him sitting on a box.

"What are you doing?" said the farmer. "Well," answered the boy, "I am trying to figure out why these black hens lay white eggs."

"I didn't send you out here to figure, I sent you to get eggs. Now get those eggs and then get another job."

The hired boy was engager in unprofitable thinking while sitting on the box when the farmer entered. He was sent out to do a specific thing—to gather eggs, which he failed to do so.

The farmer's hired boy is typical of many boys and men who spend time in unprofitable thinking instead of profitable action.

The story is told of a young man who, because he was his uncle's favorite nephew, thought he was going to inherit his great wealth and so resolved to take life easy.

One day his uncle overheard him remark, "I haven't got to worry myself about work, uncle has plenty of money saved, and when I step into his shoes I'll make it fly."

But his uncle, who had worked hard to amass his fortune, was not in sympathy with his nephew's plan to squander, so willed his property to another nephew who gave promise of becoming a sound, efficient, business-like man, capable of putting to good use whatever money he might earn through his own efforts, or by inheritance. To the nephew who had hoped to inherit his money he left his "shoes."

There are many kinds of unprofitable thinking which injure beyond repair a man's chance to make the most of himself and to rewards of faithful endeavor.

You will find in every business some people who spend a lot of time waiting for an opportunity to "lay down" on their job or to give as little in return for the wage they receive as they possibly can.

But the day always comes sooner or later, when they are found out. Their thinking gets registered somehow in their bosses' mind and their places are given to others. You will find everywhere young men who try to formulate schemes how they can sow little in the field of labor and still reap abundance, how they can spend all they may earn in pleasure and still have a bank account.

You will find everywhere, those who think that if they wait long enough something will happen in the line of luck, or pull, or chance, that, or someone will come along who will give them all that their heart desires.

Such thinking never gets a man anywhere on the road to lasting success. It is a delusion. It is unprofitable.

On the desk of a successful merchant is the motto, "Think right and right away." I commend to every young man in this place today these words. Wrong thoughts are the most unprofitable investment anyone can have. They lead a man into moral bankruptcy.

Right thinking, backed by ambition and conscientious labor is independent of luck or pull.

But, "Think right and right away," is not all. There is another step in the process of making a success of your life. It is: "Start right and right away."

Profitable thinking must be put to work, it must be given a chance to prove its worth.

"Think right and right away," "Start right and right away," are best interpreted in the third step, which is "Do right and right away." Life is after all a most serious thing, and God has given it to us as an investment. To what use are we putting it? Is our life an asset or a liability to the world? Are we living up to the best that is in us? Are we using our brains in search of the highest and noblest possessions? Have our thoughts been profitable? Have they been right thoughts? Whither have we been journeying? Towards success or failure, towards happiness or not, toward victory or defeat?

I leave with you the master keys which with your own efforts will open to you a future abounding with life's best possessions. The first is: "Think right and right away." The second is: "Start right and right away." The third is: "Do right and right away."—Exchange.

Dahlia Root Rich in Sugar

The sweetening quality of dahlia roots is 60 per cent greater than the amount of sugar obtained from sugar cane, according to estimates. The root is not starchy like that of the potato, but is rich in sugar. Dahlias grow wild in Mexico and can be grown anywhere in the United States. —Dearborn Independent.
