Keep Up Family Interest.

-Jean Brocks Burt.

Now that summer is come and the heavy work begins outside housecleaning to the house, and of course more socials and community affairs commencing, the family is rather divided. The days are getting longer but we will have to retire in good time each night anyway in order to greatest possible advantage. These be up with the chickens in the morning and around to our duties.

The farmer works until chore time, does his chores, eats supper and it is soon bedtime. How much time has has really improved them mentally? and mother and the girls washed the dishes and tidied the kitchen?

This is an important thought. There ties which make a home more beautiful. Of course we do not expect this busy man or his equally busy wife to take the same time in summer that they do in winter, but it is entirely wrong to let the interest drop altogether. Every family knows its own likes and dislikes better than any other person would so we can not make any set rules for all but we know that home will be much more like home if each member's ideas upon the subject under discussion are given. Incidentally this will give them better conversational powers besides providing a common interest .-Mrs. O. S., in Indiana Farmer's Guide.
