At the auditorium last Sunday morning Rev. W. R. Coates preached to a large congregation. Miss Lillie Peedin presided at the piano.

Rev. Mr. Coates was at his best, delivering one of his most interesting sermons.

He emphasized the importance of the song service, and the fact that the evangelists of this day sway their audiences through the music and song service.

The singing classes present were the Princeton choir of the Free Will Baptist church, Mr. C. B. Thomas instructor and leader; the home choir with Mr. M. G. Phillips, leader; the Tees Chapel choir, Mr. David Langley, leader; the Johnston Union choir, Mr. R. E. Thomas, leader; and the Junior choir, composed of 39 little boys and girls.

All the classes show what can be accomplished by practice and having a good instructor. The large audience was a source of inspiration to the preacher and it is true that since Rev. Mr. Coates reorganized the F. W. B. church the attendance has been steadily increasing.

EVERY FARM SHOULD HAVE A RADIO

Raleigh, March 15.—Figures compiled by the Department of Commerce of the United States show that there are only 1,363 radios in use on the farms of North Carolina.

This figure is lower than it should be, in the opinion of Dean J. O. Schaub of the School of Agriculture at State College. Dean Schaub states that every farm should have a radio and when the proposed state-owned broadcasting station is put into actual use, he feels that there will be a tremendous increase in the number of radios owned by farmers.

"Last year," says Dean Schaub, "there were 283,491 farms in North Carolina. This was an increase of nearly 20,000 over the number found in 1920 and when we consider that only a little over 1,000 of these farms have radios, our standing is very low indeed. This is due in part to the fact that we have only one radio station, WBT at Charlotte, which sends out crop reports and market news."

According to Dean Schaub, there will undoubtedly be an increase in the number of radios on the farms in the near future. In some states, now, from 25 to 40 per cent of the farms are equipped with this modern source of information.

As a general rule, farmers have bought the best sets available. In 1923 it was found in a study made by the United States Department of Agriculture that on more than 1,000 farms widely scattered over the country, the average cost of the sets was $175. Today better and more easily operated sets can be bought for half of this amount.

On account of the strides that have been made in perfecting the radio and the wonderful information and entertainment prepared for the different broadcasting stations, Dean Schaub urges North Carolina farmers to give more attention to this new hired man, and, where feasible to put in a modern receiving set.

Tom Tarheel says he is getting ready to cash in on the shortage of horses and mules by trying to raise a few colts.

Great Liquor Plant Destroyed In Craven Co.

Beer Was Sufficient To Run Out 12,500 Gallons of Whiskey

New Bern, March 12.—What is said to be the largest moonshine plant ever raided in North Carolina was destroyed here yesterday in the eastern part of Craven County by M. C. McDuffie, of Fayetteville, district prohibition enforcement officer and a party of assistants. The plant has a capacity of 1,800 gallons, consisting of four 400-gallon copper stills and one with a capacity of 200 gallons, there were 152 fermenters, each capable of holding 500 gallons. These contained 75,000 gallons of beer. Not far from the plant was found 300 gallons of whiskey.

The officers estimated that the 75,000 gallons of beer was sufficient to run out 12,500 gallons of whiskey. The cost of the sugar used was said to be $7,500. The entire cost of the plant was said to have been around $25,000. Nobody was found at the still at the time of the capture and no arrests have been made.

Cow Not Always What She Seems

Dairy Specialist Gives Seven Points To Observe When Buying Cows

1. As a rule, it is not advisable to buy the first cow offered for sale but arrange to visit several farmers who have cows that they will sell. As each animal is inspected, make a memorandum of the cow as to her desirability, udder, age, dairy type, defects and price.

2. It is quite important to learn the age and this may usually be determined by the appearance of the teeth, horn and general condition of the animal. Never purchase a matured cow without first examining the teeth as her age is largely indicated by the condition shown in the lower teeth.

If you wish to secure a cow under six years of age, the permanent teeth should always be sharp and show no signs of having worn flat. At the age of three years, the animal has just two permanent teeth in front, known as the pincer teeth. Each succeeding year, two more permanent teeth appear on each side of the pincers, so that at the age of six years, the animal has a full set of permanent teeth. Width between the teeth and looseness does not always denote age. When the calf is born with the two temporary pincer teeth in front, they can always be moved, sometimes one-fourth of an inch, as loose teeth are necessary so that while grazing the animal will not injure the upper lip.

3. When the heifer is one year old, a circle appears on the horn; this disappears but reappears the second year, also disappears but shows at the age of three, this time to remain permanent. Therefore in computing age by counting the number of rings appearing on the animal's horns, always add three years to each ring shown. This is only approximate. For instance, a cow six years old will usually show three rings on the horn.

4. Do not depend altogether on the information as to age, amount of milk produced and date of freshening, as supplied by the owner. You must largely determine these important factors and do your own thinking. If the cow is supposed to be within three months of the freshening period, the fetus can easily be located by an external examination using the hand on the outer wall of the abdomen on the right side.

5. Decide what the cows are actually worth compared to similar cows in the community to which you are taking them, and do not pay more than the real value.

6. If possible, after having visited several farms where cows are offered for sale and you have by this time a memorandum of each animal visited for your consideration, then select the cow that you are sure fully meets these requirements and can be purchased for her true value.

7. After the cow has been purchased and delivered to the farmer, it is quite important for the county agent to advise the new owner that the cow cannot produce milk without feed. A ration consisting of available grains, roughage and possibly purchased cottonseed meal could be figured out to the best advantage by the extension man and the farmer then taught how to feed the cow liberally and profitably.—F. R. Farnham, Dairy Extension Specialist.

MERCHANTS SCHOOL TO BEGIN MONDAY

to help merchants sell more goods by delivering more for the customer's dollar. A few samples of what happens as a result of these meetings are: salespeople sell more because they serve better; cooperative advertising brings more trade to town; re-arranged stores that customers like better; window displays that bring more customers into the stores; buying methods that keep stocks down and assortments up; profit figuring that insures a mark-up fair to merchants and customers; general recognition of the retailer as a community factor; a Merchants' organization with a purpose and a plan; a business program that puts stores "on their toes."

The Union Daily Times in commenting upon the institute held in Union, S. C., says: "Expressions of approval are coming to us from many merchants and clerks. Union will be a better business center as a result of the institute."

The institute in Smithfield will be held in the courthouse, and the time of the meetings will be announced later.
