Sent To Roads Takes Appeal From A 12 Months Term; Other Cases In Recorder's Court

A case in Recorder's court this week proved that eavesdropping does not pay. Jean Hasting was charged in court with trespass and eavesdropping and on the latter charged was sentenced to jail to be worked on the roads of Johnston county for a period of twelve months, after being found guilty by the court. On the charge of trespass, he was also found guilty and was sentenced to the roads for thirty days. He was taxed with the cost in both instances. Th defendant took an appeal to Superior court and was placed under
