Death of Ray Parrish.

Upon the request of his dear mother, I will try to write the death of her son.

On May 22, 1929 that dreadful enemy we call death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Shepard Parrish and took from them their darling son, Ray. He was stricken down about three weeks with that awful disease, typhoid fever. All was done for him that mother and father, kind friends and physicians could do, but none could stay the cold hands of death. He bore his suffering without much complaint, but the good Lord only knew how much pain he bore. Ray was a good boy. To know him was to love him. He was so good and so quiet one could hardly tell he was about.

Jonah and the Great Fish.

The suggestion that the reputation of the story of Jonah and the whale in "A New Commentary on Holy Scriptures," edited by Bishop Gore, which was recently published, was based upon insufficient knowledge of the whale is made by Mr. G. H. Henn, of Granthamroad, Sparkbrook, Birmingham.

Mr. Henn said to a Daily Mail reporter:

My own experience was in Birmingham about 25 years ago when the carcass of a whale was displayed for a week on vacant land in Navigation street, outside New-street Station.

I was one of twelve men who went into its mouth, passed through its throat, and moved about in what was equivalent to a fair-sized room. Its throat was large enough to serve as a doo-bless each and every one that helped in any way.

A dear one from them is gone. A voice they loved is still. A place is vacant in their home. That never can be filled. Thou art gone but not forgotten. Never will thy memory fade; Sweetest thought will ever linger 'Round the grave where thou art laid.

Death of Therman Pilkington

Therman Pilkington, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. G. Pilkington of Princeton, was instantly killed on Saturday, July 13, about four o'clock when he fell from the top rafters of a tobacco barn where he was playing. He was a member of the first grade of Progress school and also a member of Progressive Presbyterian Sunday school. Therman was born March 5, 1922 and he had spent his few short years near his birthplace.

Even though very young he had cultivated the spirit of unselfishness and he was loved by young and old. He always had a kind and cheerful greeting for all that he met.

The funeral service was conducted at the home by Rev. Chester Alexander of Smithfield. The little body was laid to rest in the family burial plot near Brogden school. The host of beautiful flowers expressed the love of the community for Therman as nothing else could do.

There are left in the family circle the parents, five brothers: Albert, Israel, Elmer, Ira and R. J.; two sisters: Laura and Flossie.
