

County News

Cleveland

CLAYTON, Route 1, Oct. 31.—At Oakland church on Sunday, October 27, Rev. Mr. Linke, superintendent of home missions of Granville Presbytery, preached a forceful sermon. Rev. Chester Alexander preached at 7:30 p. m. Rev. J. S. Kennison, of Durham, is conducting a series of revival services at Oakland. Preaching each evening at 7:30. All are cordially invited.

Miss Margaret Wright, who has been critically ill recently is able to be out again. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Quite a number of children of our community are having mild cases of diphtheria but are recovering, we are glad to say.

Misses Hart and Melchion and Messrs. Turner and Booker made a trip to Raleigh recently.

The six months schools opened on Monday, October 28. The cotton is almost out so we hope the children can attend regularly.

Mrs. C. C. Young and Mrs. H. L. Boney are teaching at Piney Forest school again this year.

The public and especially Dr. E. N. Booker will be delighted when Middle creek bridges are rebuilt. Dr. E. N. Booker attended the Johnston County Medical Society at Clayton Tuesday.

Friends of Mr. Pou Coats will be sorry to know that he was painfully injured in an automobile accident last Sunday afternoon. One arm was broken, a rib was broken and he suffered internal injuries. He was taken to the Johnston County Hospital by his physician, Dr. Booker, where he is doing as well as possible.

Misses Hart and Melchion and Mrs. Stephenson spent the week end at their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brimley, of Winston-Salem, spent the week end at the home of Mr. F. S. Wood. Mrs. Brimley, nee Miss Louise Wood, was a former pupil at Cleveland.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Call spent last Thursday in Wilson with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Call.

Mr. J. C. Diehl and family and Miss Freddie Oliver motored to Raleigh Saturday.

Misses Louise Robinson and Mary Neal Clement spent last week end with friends in Raleigh.

Mr. Don Bailey and sister, Miss Shellie, of Wilson, were guests of Miss Freddie Oliver Sunday.

Rev. L. W. McFarland, of High Point, spent last Saturday with Supt. and Mrs. F. M. Waters.

Mr. W. G. Upchurch, of Raleigh, was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Crain Sunday.

Miss Lula Deans has returned to her home in Wilson after spending last week with Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Deans.

Mr. Leslie Holland, of Langley Field, Va., spent last week end here with Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Woodard. Mr. Holland has been with the flying corps for several years and is a brother of Mrs. Woodard.

Mrs. Geo. Siler was operated on for appendicitis Sunday at the Johnston County Hospital in Smithfield. She stood the operation well and her condition at present seems satisfactory.

Twenty-two ladies from Selma attended the Woman's Missionary Union which met in Princeton Thursday, October 24, in annual session. A most interesting program was carried out and splendid reports were heard from the various organizations all over Johnston county. Lunch was served on the grounds at the noon hour.

Mr. W. T. Bailey attended church in Selma Sunday night at the Baptist church.

Mr. W. A. Hawley, of Fayetteville, was a visitor here Monday. He formerly taught here in our school and his many friends were glad to see him again.

Mrs. Joe Woodard Sr., of Glendale, is visiting relatives here this week.

Miss Clara Fitzgerald spent the week end at her home in Pine Level.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Bailey and son, Willard and Mr. Rufus Phillips spent Monday afternoon in Wilson.

Miss Pauline Barbour spent the week end here with Miss Nellie Hatcher.

Mr. Clayton House, of Bethel, was a visitor here Sunday afternoon.

The spelling match at the school building Friday night was a success and thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Mrs. A. J. Price and Miss Matilda Brown are our "champion spellers."

Mr. W. A. Hawley, of Fayetteville, was a visitor here Monday. He formerly taught here in our school and his many friends were glad to see him again.

Mrs. Joe Woodard Sr., of Glendale, is visiting relatives here this week.

Miss Clara Fitzgerald spent the week end at her home in Pine Level.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Bailey and son, Willard and Mr. Rufus Phillips spent Monday afternoon in Wilson.

Miss Pauline Barbour spent the week end here with Miss Nellie Hatcher.

Mr. Clayton House, of Bethel, was a visitor here Sunday afternoon.

The spelling match at the school building Friday night was a success and thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Mrs. A. J. Price and Miss Matilda Brown are our "champion spellers."

Mr. W. T. Bailey attended church in Selma Sunday night at the Baptist church.

Mr. W. A. Hawley, of Fayetteville, was a visitor here Monday. He formerly taught here in our school and his many friends were glad to see him again.

Mr. Luther Thorn, of Live Oak, was in our community Sunday night.

Mrs. Annie Sellers, of Selma, spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. L. S. Thompson.

Master Verlon Brady, of the Crech section, spent last Thursday night with Mr. Edward West.

Mr. Elmer S. Johnson, of Kenly, was in our community Saturday.

Mr. Corbett, of Corinth-Holders, visited friends here Saturday.

Bethany

KENLY, Route 2, Oct. 31.—Mrs. Tommie Durham and children, of Kenly, and Mr. W. Y. Creech and family, of Wilson, spent the week end with their mother, Mrs. K. Creech.

Miss Thelma Starling, formerly of Selma school, is living in this community and attending Glendale school.

A number of our citizens attended the Parent-Teacher meeting at Glendale last week. The music was especially enjoyed.

Miss Clyde Atkinson, of Glendale, visited Miss Beatrice Starling Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Creech spent Sunday with Mr. Charlie Wallace near Smithfield.

Mrs. W. D. Stencil spent Saturday evening in Selma with her sister, Mrs. C. A. Corbett.

Brogden

BENTONVILLE, Nov. 3.—Rev. W. O. Henderson filled his regular appointment at Mill Creek Sunday morning and night. A large crowd was present at each service.

Miss Julia Rose left Monday for Plainfield where she will teach this winter.

We welcome Miss Rama Brantley of Zebulon into our midst as teacher of the Mill Creek school.

Mr. Willis Rose is at home from Brooklyn, N. Y., where he has been confined in a hospital. He has been in the U. S. Navy for some time.

Little Billie Toler, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Toler, has been quite sick with diphtheria but is much better.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Williams and son, of Raleigh, visited in this community last Sunday.

The young people of the community delightfully entertained Misses Effie and Ila Williams at their home on Saturday night, October 12. The guests began to arrive at 7:30 each bringing some refreshments. After many interesting games and stunts were enjoyed, Misses Thelma Thornton and Effie Williams served delicious candies and fruits. As the hour for departure drew near each guest declared he had spent a most enjoyable evening. Those present on this occasion were: Misses Flossie Adams, Kathleen and Christine Aswell, Annie Dunn, Amanda Lambert, Luna and Marie Morris, Georgia Mae Stevens, Thelma and Erma Thornton, Effie and Ila Williams, Messrs. Gilbert Adams, Leonard Allen, Edgar and Weldon Bass, Jake Dunn, Carl Holman, Samuel Lambert, Gardner Morris, John Stevens, Howard and Carrie Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. George Price's only child died last Friday morning about eight o'clock after about three weeks of illness.

Misses Maude, Mildred and Dorris Hollowell spent Sunday afternoon in Goldsboro.

Sanford Pennington happened to a bad accident last Sunday afternoon. He fell from a tree and sustained a broken foot.

Misses Maggie Price, Maude Hollowell and Alverta Price and Mr. Seth Hollowell went to Goldsboro Sunday afternoon.

Miss Elma Stevens, of Greensboro, came to our community last Friday to attend the funeral of her little niece.

Miss Anna Outland, of Woodland, a teacher of Grantham school, spent last week end with the family of Mr. David Hollowell.

Misses Rosabell and Dessie Lewis spent last week end with Miss Martha Price in Goldsboro.

The grammar grades of Grantham school gave a Halloween play Friday night, Nov. 1 in the Grantham school auditorium.

Mr. W. T. Bailey attended church in Selma Sunday night at the Baptist church.

Mr. W. A. Hawley, of Fayetteville, was a visitor here Monday. He formerly taught here in our school and his many friends were glad to see him again.

Mrs. Joe Woodard Sr., of Glendale, is visiting relatives here this week.

Miss Clara Fitzgerald spent the week end at her home in Pine Level.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Bailey and son, Willard and Mr. Rufus Phillips spent Monday afternoon in Wilson.

Miss Pauline Barbour spent the week end here with Miss Nellie Hatcher.

Mr. Clayton House, of Bethel, was a visitor here Sunday afternoon.

The spelling match at the school building Friday night was a success and thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Mrs. A. J. Price and Miss Matilda Brown are our "champion spellers."

Mr. W. T. Bailey attended church in Selma Sunday night at the Baptist church.

Mr. W. A. Hawley, of Fayetteville, was a visitor here Monday. He formerly taught here in our school and his many friends were glad to see him again.

Mrs. Joe Woodard Sr., of Glendale, is visiting relatives here this week.

Miss Clara Fitzgerald spent the week end at her home in Pine Level.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Bailey and son, Willard and Mr. Rufus Phillips spent Monday afternoon in Wilson.

Miss Pauline Barbour spent the week end here with Miss Nellie Hatcher.

Mr. Clayton House, of Bethel, was a visitor here Sunday afternoon.

The spelling match at the school building Friday night was a success and thoroughly enjoyed by those present. Mrs. A. J. Price and Miss Matilda Brown are our "champion spellers."

Don't forget to bring your friends out to Sunday school at Fairview Sunday morning at ten o'clock. Christian Endeavor Sunday night at seven o'clock. Everybody is invited.

Holt Mill

SMITHFIELD, Route 2, Oct. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Lester Worley, Miss Rosa Capps and Mr. Wm. A. Woodard made a trip to Goldsboro Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. J. C. Talton has returned to her home near Princeton after spending a few days with Mrs. Jesse Worley.

Those who attended court at Smithfield Tuesday were: Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Capps and son, Frank, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Webb, Mr. Jesse Worley and son, Wesley, Mr. Oscar Creech, Art Wiggs and Pate Woodard, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Worley, Mrs. Bud Edwards, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Capps and John Capps. Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Thompson and little son, James Harold, and Miss Edna Wiggs, of near Pine Level, visited in this section Sunday afternoon.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Worley October 24 a son. Mother and baby are getting along nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Worley, Mrs. J. R. Capps and two daughters, Nedra and Rosa and Mrs. Oscar Creech visited Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hill of Sanders Chapel section Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Hoover's Manners.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

There were 1695 individuals registered for University correspondence work last year. This number represented a total enrollment of approximately 2500 due to the fact that many of the students were registered for more than one course. The enrollment for last year showed a gain over that of previous years.

It is now possible to study any of 150 different University courses by correspondence. Practically all of these courses lead either to the A. B. or B. S. degree or to the advancement of teacher certification credit.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr. Hoover was there to do honor to Mr. Edison, and when he stood aside for the inventor, Mrs. Hoover also yielding the place assigned her to Mrs. Edison, the President and his wife did that which was fitting. "In honor preferring one another" was one of the injunctions of St. Paul to the Roman Christians. Paul's family connections and his education gave him call for the seats of honor. He was a Pharisee of the strictest sect before he saw the light on the Damascus road, but after that he was willing to give others first place. But you couldn't expect that either democracy or Christian charity would count among folks who count their position at table as of first importance and have no manners about where they shall sit when they are guests.—Statesville Landmark.

When Mr. Hoover declined the seat of honor at the banquet in honor of Mr. Edison, yielding the place to which his official position entitled him, to the man whom the gathering was to honor, he did that which was seemly, and at the same time set an example that should count for something in Washington, where there is a constant exhibition of bad manners and lack of breeding in the unseemly squabble about seats of honor. The President's position calls for him to have first place and he usually takes it as a matter of course. So much of a custom is this that it would ordinarily disarrange matters if he stood aside for another. But when the President stood aside at the Edison banquet it was not only a compliment to Mr. Edison, as it is called, but it was an exhibition of good taste and regard for the proprieties of the occasion, seems to us. The dinner was in honor of Mr. Edison, not in honor of the President. Mr.