The Herald has purchased a new set of mats for the linotype which sets the news matter and next week we hope the paper will make a much better appearance.

Boll weevil control is claiming the attention of farmers now perhaps more than ever. The Herald is glad to announce that C. H. Brannon, Extension Entomologist in charge of Boll Weevil Control at State College, has consented to write a series of articles on this subject for this paper.

The newspaper institute held at Chapel Hill last week under the auspices of the North Carolina Press Association and of the Extension Department of the State University, was perhaps the best one held yet.

A GOOD TIME TO BUILD— One of the finest assets a town can have is a good building and loan association, and Smithfield is fortunate in this respect.

Some time ago Dr. Clarence Poe in a radio talk advised young men who wished to make farming their life work, to buy land now. Land is cheap now but, in his opinion, it will not stay cheap.

A home owner makes a better citizen. The pride of possession increases his interest in civic matters. The community means more to him, and he means more to the community.

And It Came to Pass—

In the year when McLean became king in Carolina there came into one of the provinces a young man learned in the science of theology, and he carried in the province certain years. And he was chief speaker in some of the synagogues in that country and the people heard him gladly.

grieved at the saying for they revered him, but when he persisted they yielded and wished him good success in the foreign land.

Now when he had made known unto one of his congregation that he would soon journey into another province the keeper of the treasury issued a decree that bringing his gifts unto the synagogue on the following Sabbath that the chief speaker might be paid all whereof he had been promised and that no man might owe him ought when he departed.

Now it came to pass after the congregation had sung the last hymn that many pressed around the chief speaker with farewell messages and good wishes and the keeper of the treasury could not approach him because of the throngs.

Now it came to pass on the third day after the Sabbath that the keeper of the treasury had to go into the city and as he put on his cloak he heard something rattle. Thrusting his hand into his pocket, he drew forth the check he had written for the speaker of the synagogue, and he was sore amazed.

Now when the keeper of the treasury was arrived at the house of the chief speaker he was profuse in his apologies and he explained how he had fallen into error because of the darkness that night and had only just discovered the blunder.

At last the chief speaker could draw his shekels from the bank, and the treasurer departed and returned unto his own house rejoicing.

IN MEMORIAM. The following poem was written in memory of my baby who was born November 25, 1929 and died January 7, 1930.

Oh, Lord it seemed good to thee To take my infant dear.

I hope it will work good for me And cause me thee to fear;

Oh, may I meet my babe above In heaven among the blest,

That I may praise thy holy name Who saved its soul by grace.
