ROUNTREE-WARREN WEDDING.

A quiet marriage of interest to Smithfield friends took place last Sunday afternoon in Greenville at the Presbyterian manse when Miss Dora Warren of this city became the bride of Mr. E. C. Rountree of Tarboro. The Presbyterian pastor, Rev. W. S. Allison, performed the ceremony. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Rountree went to Tarboro where they will make their home.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mrs. Addie Warren of this city. The bridegroom, who is a native of Greenville, formerly lived in Smithfield where he was manager of the Sanders theatre until it was purchased by the Victory some weeks ago. Mr. Rountree is now manager of a theatre in Tarboro.

MEETING OF WOMAN'S CLUB.

The regular business meeting of the Woman's club was held Wednesday afternoon at the club room with a good attendance. Mrs. H. L. Skinner presided, calling for the various reports. The report of the nominating committee was given by Mrs. E. J. Wellons, who stated that the only change to be made in the personnel of the present officers is that of the civic chairman, whose term has expired. The committee named Mrs. Kirby Rose to succeed Mrs. J. A. Wellons, who has headed this department for the past two years. One new member, Mrs. I. W. Medlin, was reported at the meeting Wednesday.

At the conclusion of the business session, the program was turned over to Mrs. D. H. Creech, chairman of the literary department. This part of the program was featured by two vocal selections, "Such a Little Fellow" and "Because," by Miss Ida Privette, of Spring Hope, and by a talk on "Famous Men and Women Whose Birthday Fall in February," by Mrs. Harvey Boney.

His message was an appeal to men and women to work together and serve God without thought of denomination because everyone was working toward the same goal. Each service has been well attended and it is hoped this meeting will be a great success.

TUNES, GIRLS, GAGS, ENRICH STREET GIRL

Screen Achieves True Musical Drama in Latest Picture

Local audiences next Monday and Tuesday night will see tart drama, rollicking comedy and gay music successfully combined when "Street Girl," Radio pictures' enjoyable musical drama opens at the Sanders theatre. It is not the first time Hollywood has tried to unite the three on the talking screen, but it is the first time it has been done in such an intelligent and convincing manner.

"Street Girl" will appeal to almost any type of audience. It has everything that goes to make up the perfect entertainment. Betty Compton capably plays the lead as an appealing little violinist and entertainer in a New York East side cafe. She really plays the violin and plays it satisfactorily.

Three Provide Laughs. One of the high spots of the show is the comedy furnished by probably the best combination of comics ever presented in a picture. Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks and Joseph Cawthorn, all familiar to musical comedy and motion picture audiences, get every laugh possible from Jane Murfin's sparkling dialogue.

"Street Girl" presents four of the most intriguing musical numbers which will take to Smithfield this year. "My Dream Memory," a bewitching waltz, featured in Miss Compton's violin numbers; "Lovable and Sweet," "Prince of Good Fellows" and "Broken Up Tunes," featured by a fast stepping chorus in the night club sequences, are marked as instantaneous hits.

New Talking Equipment. "Street Girl" will mark the opening of Sanders theatre's all new talking equipment. The machine which has heretofore been in use has been discarded and the latest and best in talking and sound equipment has been installed. An expert from the King factory has been here for the past two weeks acoustically treating the house which will, according to him, improve the hearing nearly a hundred per cent. Mrs. Howell, the manager, promises with this new equipment to give her patrons as good talking pictures as can be found in the large cities.

Death of W. W. Starling.

Starling, of Raleigh; Mrs. Jack Capps, of Raleigh; and Mrs. Fred Jones, of Pine Level. A light from our household is gone.

MRS. STEVENS ENTERTAINS CLUB.

Mrs. E. S. Stevens was hostess to the Friday Bridge club Thursday afternoon at her home on South Third street. Early spring flowers added to the attractiveness of the home. Three tables were grouped for the game and play began at 3:30 o'clock. Attractive high score prizes for the club and for the visitors were awarded. Late in the afternoon tempting refreshments were served, consisting of chicken a la king, beaten biscuits, tomato and grapefruit salad, followed with ice box cake and coffee.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, Mrs. W. B. Stanley, who departed this life November 14, 1929. Oh the memory of that morning as I stood with aching heart and saw my dear mother so swiftly taken by death. Rest on, dear mother, your labor is over. You are gone to dwell with the angels on heaven's bright shore. A faithful mother both true and kind, a better mother will never be found. No one knows the heartaches, oh, who can realize the grief that is crowning my pathway for my dear loved one today. Dear mother, I am sad and lonely, tonight, thinking of you. I will never forget you, dear mother, though long may seem the day and often in lonely hours I wipe the tears away. When the Lord who gave doth call us we know we must to him bow. As the roll stream of life is passing and my mind is called to the duties of my home, an old vacant chair recalls the smile and sweet devotion of one who will no more sit there. In my heart your memory lingers. I can almost hear your voice singing with the angels around the throne. I dreamed last night of seeing you asleep on the other shore, not in the casket I last saw you in, but one spotless and white as snow. Dear mother, you are gone and I am left alone. The flowers I lay on your grave wither and turn to mold, but the love for my dear mother will never grow old.

A NOTE OF THANKS

We wish sincerely to thank each and every one who rendered assistance during the lingering illness and death of our wife and mother. May God bless each and every one of them.

The manager of this store, Mr. O. L. Ray, stated to the Herald reporter that the firm had done a very good business since it opened up last September. He was well pleased with their short stay in this city.

PLAY UP EVENT FIVE YEARS OLD

Washington Paper Eager For Grist For Anti-Prohibition Mill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—News has just reached Washington of the death of Stephen S. Holt, Smithfield lawyer, who was instantly killed June 1, 1925, when Detective Jesse Wyatt, of the Raleigh police department, opened fire at an automobile which failed to stop at his order.

This unlawful shooting was so severely condemned by the News and Observer and other North Carolina newspapers at the time that public opinion was aroused to such an extent that officers ceased the practice of shooting at automobile tires. The News and Observer initiated a campaign of education that resulted in a reformation of unlawful practices, but none of this news ever reached Washington apparently as the Washington Herald today carried on its front page an account of the shooting, which it got out of the Congressional Record of January 26, 1929.

This account is a dispatch from Raleigh to the Asheville Citizen under date of the shooting. The dispatch is printed in black type, and many a Washingtonian now labors under the impression that North Carolina is a state that still allows its police officers to shoot indiscriminately.

As a matter of fact Wyatt was brought to trial, convicted by a jury from Durham county, sentenced to six months in the State Prison by Judge Midyette, and served a part of that sentence, finally being pardoned by Governor McLean.

None of these developments are given in the Washington Herald account, which explains how misleading is much of the anti-prohibition propaganda in the National Capital. So misleading is it that members of Congress must rely upon papers from their own and other states to ascertain the status of public opinion.—From News and Observer Bureau.

SHOWS LETTER WRITTEN BY CIVIL WAR SOLDIER.

D. O. Lassiter, of near Four Oaks, was in town this week and showed the following letter which was written by Bythian L. Tool while a soldier during the Civil War. It was written at Plymouth, Washington county, on July 22, 1864, and was addressed to his father, Lodrick Tool. The letter was as follows:

"My dear Father: I take the present opportunity of answering your very kind and welcome letter of the 18th which came so hand last night. It gave me great satisfaction to hear from you all but did render me uneasiness to hear that your health was getting worse. These few lines leave me well and I do truly hope and trust to the Lord that they may go safely to your hand in due time and find you all well.

"I have no important news to write to you at this time, father. There is some sickness in Company D yet, but not as much as has been. E. O. Beasley is down with chills. Uncle John Lee is mending as fast as could be expected. He can't walk about much yet but as much as almost any man could that had been as sick as he has been. He sends his love to all his friends and wishes to be remembered to you all but had rather be with you to take some cider. I think he will be at home in a short time for Doctor Potter said as soon as he got able to go home he would send him and he is about able to go now."

away from this place. He wants us to go to Wilmington and we do hope that he may get us there to stay for the war.

"Father, I have heard that the old men are gone back to their homes again, and I hope it is true for I don't want any apples to rot for I want plenty of cider when I come home, and I think this cruel war will end some time this year. We will try what virtue there is in a conservative Congress and governor, and see if we can't have it in a short time.

"Tell the children today that I want to see them the worst I ever did. Tell Jimmy and Tobe that I have not forgotten them nor shall I if I stay in the war five more years. I want to see Jimmy the worst of anybody in the state if I know who I do want to see the worst. I want to see so many that I don't know who I want to see the worst.

"Father, I got the five dollars you sent me and it came in a good time for I did not have a cent. Father, we are going to do the best we can for T. D. Snead, W. I. Smith, and W. G. Banks and you must do the same. We don't think that it would be healthy for the old 'seecesh' to go to Congress and for that reason we must not vote for them.

"You wrote me that it was raining nicely there and I hope, it may continue until crops are made. I hope you will make enough to do with. Write soon. Your loving son till death, BYTHIAN L. TOOL, 'To Lodrick and Sarah Tool.'

Highway Beautification.

Like the weather "beautification of the highway" has been much discussed but little done about it. The women's clubs have agitated the subject, the highway commission is interested, also the state department of conservation and development is behind the proposition. The latest news is that North Carolina and Florida have been chosen by the American Nature Association as the most promising for good results in highway beautification. Also Mrs. W. L. Lawton, chairman of National Council for Protection of Roadside Beauty, and chairman of rural highway advertising of the General Federation is making a survey of the state, taking photographs, speaking before groups of women and men showing the possibilities of beautification, and at the same time (we presume) creating interest. Let us hope good results will follow and that Mrs. Lawton will turn her camera on the mammoth and unsightly dug-outs on the highway, caused by digging down embankments, to get grit to fill in washes on other roads at places five miles distant. It seems to us the first step to be taken is to conserve all of the natural beauty in sight and not make one road more unsightly by constructing another. And neither do you need to appeal to the man in charge for he very quickly informs you, with the air of a superior officer, that he is acting within the bounds of the law. All of this is done within a stone's throw of your vine and fig tree—but it is according to law.

We also have observed in many instances that trees have been cut down that could have been spared. Let us hope that Mrs. Lawton in her survey of the highway will do effective work with her camera and by talking will show the necessity of conserving that which we have.—The Uplift.

PLANTATION GARDENS FOR EASTERN TERRITORY

RALEIGH, Jan. 27.—One large garden, known as the plantation garden, where tenants and landowner may produce needed vegetables and share alike in those grown, will be urged by the Agricultural Extension Service of State College throughout eastern Carolina this year under a plan proposed by O. F. McCrary, district agent in Central North Carolina.

Mr. McCrary proposed this idea at a meeting recently held in Scotland county. There the idea was enlarged upon to include plantation dairies, plantation poultry flocks and probably plantation swine herds. However, the plan of having one central garden was immediately adopted and the county home and farm agents reported that several will be established in the county this season. Under this plan, it is suggested that the owner will not urge his tenants to have several small gardens about over the farm but that one main garden will be established near the owner's home where each tenant will work as needed and from which he will get his supply of fresh vegetables for the table and some to can for use next winter. The owner will supply the seeds and fertilizer and will look after its cultivation.

But Scotland county agricultural leaders are not limiting their garden plans to this one idea. A number of demonstration gardens will be established at central points about over the county and both the home and farm agents will aid the owners in producing a year around supply of vegetables.

The plan adopted in Scotland county for this year will be as a demonstration or model to other counties in the central district. Mr. McCrary says that the home and the farm agent will have one program throughout and each will assist the other. The district home agent, Mrs. Cornelia C. Morris of State College, has also agreed to these plans and will aid in their fulfillment.
