e LETTER

Washington' March 4th, 1901. leanguration parades, so well as other kinds, may rail apon one acton and only on Inauguration day that no man oun soo without being impressed and thrilled. That is the great gathering of people at the east front of the Capital-acres and acres of upturned focus to see the President eworn in, and sehim deliver his Inaugural address. 'See" is the correct term, for though President Mckinley has a voice above the average in strength not more than perhaps 500 per some in all that vast throng, could hear enough of his inaugural address today to know what it was about But all ofthem could see, and that is what they were there exceled to renew at once or your for; they sould read the address in the afternoon paper.

The swearing in of Vice Pres dent Roosevelt was comparatively speaking, a private affair, as it took place in the Senate Chamber and admittance to the galleries were by ticket only, and the number of the tickets were necessiarly limited. It is safe, to say, how ever, that a greater number heard the Inaugural address of the Vice Pre-"We are all republicans and sident than heard that of the Preall office seekers." Mr. McKin- sident. One of the first daties performed by the Vice President, after Senator Free administered the oath to him, was to saminister the eath to thirteen new Senators. The President did not increase he beauty of the parade, from a pectacular point of view, when aterwaned in the wrangle between Grand Marchal Greene, of the Inangural parade, and the Union eterans and insisted that his perwall escort from the White House to the Capitol, should be composed . B. PALLE & CO. entirely of his former comrades in arms, but he greatly increased his popularity with the veterans, and did the thing that was in the even of nearly everybody, the right Watch or Clock should ia do. It may be, in fact is very likely, that Mr. McKinley will be the last soldier of the Civil war to be President, and it was fitting of honor should be composed of veterans of that war.
