Adelbert Stone Hay, son of Secretary Hay, and from U. S. Consul to Pretoria was found dead Sunday morning on the sidewalk in front of a hotel in New Haven Conn. His remains were interred in Cleveland, O.

The letter published below is indeed very encouraging. We are glad to know that we have such a strong advocate in one of Martin County's foremost citizens. Mr. Roberson was at one time one of the County Commissioners.

When we first met this gentleman, we were very much attracted by his enthusiasm for the county paper, and he has ever since been one of its strongest advocates.

The following is Mr. Roberson's letter.

Berkley, Va., June 24, 1901.
Editor of THE ENTERPRISE,
Williamston, N. C.

Dear Sir:—

I get your paper all O. K., am glad to know you are still on the prosperous road, for if any county in the state ought to appreciate a good paper it is our good and faithful old county of Martin. The people certainly ought to be proud enough of one to give it a large patronage; let the friends of you paper stir up the people to a sense of their duty in patronizing it so that you will be better able to make it a double and twisted success. The people ought to be proud of a good county paper, so much so as to patronize it liberally and also write good pieces for the paper. I know there are a plenty of good brains to write every week for your paper, in every precinct all over the county, and I would urge those that take your paper to get others to take it. Men let's have a good and glorious paper for the good county and let each other over the county know what is going on in their own community.

I did not hear from Robersonville last week; what is the matter? You must know something new every week Robersonville boys, and let it go to your paper in time for print, don't fail.

While I have left the county, it does not carry with it that I have lost the pride I have for it by any means, no! I read the paper here more than I ever did. It is worth something to read them; one can find out what is going on; and it is the only medium by which you can find out anything here.

Everything is put in the paper for the benefit of the public here, and the public gets it too, and they are proud of such a medium by which to keep up with what is going on in their midst. It gives people a better show in this life; it is a great help of safety. For instance, one of our neighbors houses are broken in and robbed, is it not a safe guard for you to know it in order to be more careful yourself with your own?

I look at a paper of being a great help to each other; if you will, it will make it profitable. Stir up men and brethren and make your paper more and more profitable. I see more need of it since I am over here.

With best wishes for your success, I am yours,

R. L. ROBERSON.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular Correspondent.)

June 24, 1901

"If the Cabinet may properly be considered as the administration, and that is my idea, the administration has no candidate to succeed the President." Those remarks were made by a gentleman whose relations with the administration are close. Continuing he said: "At a recent Cabinet meeting, it was proposed as a bit of fun, that each member of the Cabinet should write his preference for President on a slip of paper and drop it in a hat with no mark to distinguish the writer of one slip from another. Eight slips were prepared—the President was not, of course, asked to join in the game, although he was an amused spectator, and distributed. Upon each, a member of the Cabinet wrote a name and dropped it into a hat. After shaking them up, they were turned out upon the table and the laughable fact had been discovered that the Cabinet had 8 candidates, instead of one, every member having chosen a different man. There was much enjoyment over the episode and it was jocularly agreed that the Cabinet would have to get together, if it hopes to name the winner. I would like to tell the eight names written, but that would never do, I have only told this much to show that the administration, at this time, has no candidate."

Confidence is expressed in official circles that the explanation made by Secretary Hay to the Russian Ambassador, to put a stop to the tariff war with Russia, before it goes any further, but the same confidence is not felt by the general public.

The fight to oust Commissioner Evans from the head of the Pension Bureau is being pushed with renewed energy, but the Commissioner still holds the fort and appears to be backed by the President, and says he will not resign.

Sec'y Hitchcock says preparations for the opening to settlement of the Indian reservations in Oklahoma, are about completed, and it is understood that work on the President's proclamation, announcing the date for the opening, has been started.

Mistakes in sizing up was common to one in the way of privileges are common enough everywhere, but they are not all as costly as those made by John McQuade. John's father is Secretary Root's coachman, and through that fact, John got his name on the pay roll of the War Department. Then John made the mistake of supposing that he was privileged to ignore all the rules and regulations made to govern the employees of that Department. He was called up and disciplined and to emphasize the matter on his mind, he was furloughed for a few days. That might reduce John's head to its normal size, had he not filled himself with the juice that Mrs. Nation likes to spill. That gave him some new ideas about the privileges coming to him, which he proceeded to try to enjoy. One of these was the right to lick the appointment clerk. John being big and burly, and the appointment clerk a little fellow, he was having everything his own way, until other employees stopped the fight. John now has the privilege of finding another job, as his name has been crossed off Uncle Sam's roll.

Senator Butler, of N. C., Chairman of the People's Party National Committee, expressed some ideas on the industries of the South and the tariff that will attract more than passing attention. For instance he said: "Business men realize that the industries of the South cannot be built up, cannot successfully cope with the long-established industries of the North without a protective tariff. In five years, New England, in my opinion will send men to Congress instructed for free trade, while the South will probably demand a protective tariff. The manufacturing of the South are the only infant industries in the country today. The policy of the South on this question has been short-sighted, and Southern legislators in Congress have voted year after year, decade after decade, for a policy that was detrimental to that section."

Many stories of the late Gov. Pingree, of Mich. are being told in Washington, where he was well known, since his death. Ten or twelve years ago, a friend introduced Gov. Pingree to Col. John T. Mosby, in the corridor of a Washington hotel, and the following conversation took place: Pingree—"Well, Hello, Col. I haven't seen you for twenty-five years, but I remember very well the last time we met." Mosby—"Ah, what incident recalls it to your mind? I really fail to remember you, much to my regret. Pingree—"Oh, well, you wouldn't be apt to remember the date. I was captured by your men and happening to be wearing a very good, nearly new uniform, you confiscated it on the spot and gave you your old ragged buttonnits. But that's all right; all's fair in love and war, I know. Let's have a cigar." They had those cigars and others and smoked and chatted reminiscently for more than an hour. It may not be generally known that Gov. Pingree started the foundation of the fortune he afterwards made in the manufacture of shoes in the little shop of a Washington shoemaker. It was his duty to come into Washington daily for the mail of his regiment, which for a part of the civil war was stationed on the Virginia side of the Potomac, and while waiting for the mail, he learned to cobble shoes and used to make pocket change by cobbling for his comrades.

Unnecessary Loss of Time

Mr. W. S. Whedon, Cashier of the First National Bank, of Winterset, Ia., in a recent letter gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ, that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work for several days on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the drug store here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For say by N. S. Peel & Company.

A WORTHY SUCCESSOR.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed.
