A Feast of Fun.

Henry Blount gave his lecture, "Chow Chow," to a small but appreciative audience at the Opera House on Wednesday evening. Mr. Geo. W. Newell, in choice words and pleasing manner, introduced him. But, he needed no introduction to a Williamston audience, for so many here have enjoyed often his wonderful genius in oratory and impersonations. His rapid change from the pathetic to the humorous is indeed marvelous, and no man, perhaps in the South has ever approximated Henry Blount in this one feature of his lecture. The impersonations of Artemus Ward, Bob Taylor, Col. Mowbray and others were the most entertaining parts of the lecture. The tone of voice, gestures and words of Col. Mowbray (who is well remembered here,) were perfect. It was indeed an evening when one feasted on fun, and was charmed by flights of oratory that came as quickly and brightly as lightning from the storm-cloud.
