FRIDAY MAY 5, 1905.

The fourth and fifth grades were doing composition work in the school classics. There is a series of these classics beginning at the first grade and running through to the eighth grade. The classic in use in the fifth grade was "The Golden Touch," Hawthorne. Children from eight to twelve years could read understandingly a work in which were words of three and four syllables. They pronounced and used them familiarly, showing a training in this respect that will be of great practical benefit.

In the higher grades we found children reading and comprehending the great author of "Evangeline." The contrast with the use and study of English to-day and when we were sent to the board to parse a long sentence is very striking. We do not believe in the sugar coating process but if a study can be made interesting why not make it so? These children were learning by practice rules in English that we had to memorize. We could recite them to the glory and charm of our teacher but knew no more about what we were saying than if we had said nothing or had said it in Hebrew. The change is surely the result of a great revolution.

Mathematics was taught us by rule, to-day you are taught the reason and the rule is merely a means of summarizing the reason. The pupil can make his own rule after he has learned to work an example by Professor Cowper's methods. Complicated examples in per cent. were given and worked and rules explained rather than being given in a song.

Few realize the opportunity of their school days, few realize that they are the happiest and yet the most important of all days. That striving of nature to ever be what it is not or to be more of what it is which enters the soul of man from the very day he becomes one of his kind, keeps the child from being reconciled with its happy lot. That is a strange joy manifested at the school commencement which marks our march into the strife of life which must end with the grave. These boys and girls are happy, why? We do not attempt to explain, but we venture the assertion that most of them will wish for their teachers in a few days. The one idea that struck us most forcibly was the prevailing brightness and cheerfulness of the pupils. The prevailing spirit was that of joy in duty which was being faithfully performed. This is as it should be. A slothful student who never had any pride in his work loses his self-respect, confidence in his ability, which means a weak character and an indifferent man.

The teachers are the makers of the school. If there is any success to be attained it must be through the teacher. A teacher in the log cabin with logs for seats and cracks for light is preferable to a school keeper in a palace with all the modern appliances. It is fortunate for our community that we have good teachers and a good building than which there are none better.

It is to be hoped that the present corps of teachers will be with us next year when they may continue the work that is so necessary and they perform so successfully.

Don't let the children suffer. If they are fretful, peevish and cross, give them Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. The best baby Tonic known. Strength and health follow its use. 35 cents. At J. M. Wheelless & Co., Robersonville, N. C.

Veterans' Meeting.

In another column we publish an account of the called meeting of the Confederate soldiers of Williamston. This was rather a surprise meeting, thought of and executed in a day, but there had to be a beginning, conditions were ripe, there was the need, the enthusiasm spread and will spread until every Confederate soldier is called to nature's bivouac.

We hope every citizen of Martin county will take a personal interest in this re-union. It is not a duty we owe heroes but an honor we should pay the men who put aside all ties of home, of friends and loved ones and placed their life between the enemy and their country.

The number grows smaller with the advancing years and we should not wait to honor them in death. Let them be honored now. Let a monument be erected in their hearts as well as over their graves.

The Graded School.

It is to be regretted that the Graded School had to be closed at the end of the seventh month. The condition of the treasury would not justify the eighth month, therefore rather than have to make the next term one of six months, or seven as this, but possibly eight months if the board can once get the school out of debt by saving now, it was thought best to close.

The school is a source of pride to the community, and justly so. In the first-grade we find children six years old reading, writing and drawing better than most the schools we know teach by the time they are nine. One of the pupils in the first grade was asked to draw the school building with no difficulty and with no assistance—surely a marvel to the unacquainted.

In the second grade the children were drawing and coloring flowers some of which there was no difficulty in recognizing. The third grade was studying elementary geography and were thoroughly acquainted with the maps of the continents, mountain ranges, rivers and chief cities. The evidence of the master hand of the teacher was ever present. This grade had nearly completed the work which could have been easily done in another month.

Teaching Insurance.

Some years ago it was written in the Morning Post that the day was not far distant when the teaching of insurance would be an important department of education. Comment, both favorable and unfavorable, on the idea, was general. The Insurance Press of New York, looked with favor upon the idea.

The surmer following, Mr. George Tarbell, now much referred to, started the "summer school of the Equitable," where young men who held good references from their colleges, were taught insurance during the summer recess.

Since then many of the leading colleges of the country have established a department for teaching insurance, and leading insurance men deliver lectures before the classes.

Had some of our North Carolina colleges adopted the course then suggested it would not now be necessary to send north for actuaries and men to fill such like places in our own insurance companies. It is not too late to take it up now.—Raleigh Post.
