SNAPSHOTS.

According to Mr. Chandler's version the 'apostle' of the 'square deal' has been handing a few from the bottom of the pack.

It is rather surprising when you come to think of it, that so little attention has been paid to the powder trust by the magazines.

There is some money worse than tainted money—that for instance which, Massachusetts set aside for the Jamestown Exposition. It's just nasty.

Having thoroughly discussed the Russian Premier Goremykin's name, and side whiskers, the humorists are looking him over for other points of interest.

"There are things that might be worse than a Democratic House," says Senator Aldrich. Yes, the Democrats think a Republican House is one of those things.

In other words, President Roosevelt supplied the hot shot, Mr. Garfield furnished the report, and the 'standard' the kick. Now wait 'til the smoke clears up.

The Russian douma is "attempting to demand for amnesty on the czar." It will be a relief to the czar to have something forced on him that does not have a fuse attachment.

The Tribune's Washington correspondent speaks of "William E. Chandler's open defiance of the President." Mr. Chandler's open defiance, consists in denying that he is a liar.

His majesty of Boroda, India, has come to the United States to learn the secret of American success. One of the secrets of American success, is not a secret; it is hard work.

A St. Joseph, Mo. woman determined on suicide, ate morphine tablets, and set herself on fire, without results. A woman like that would even fail to graduate from a cooking school.

It might have all been different if Senators Bailey and Tillman had followed Senator Lodge's plan and used the telephone in White House conferences instead of dealing through a peacemaker.

Mr. George W. Perkins contends that it is not a crime to help the Republican party with insurance funds. It seems to take the gentleman a long time to understand that his crime consists in being "caught at it."

The contention that Chicago owns its streets has received the formal indorsement of the United States Supreme court and the belief is general that the traction companies will not try to carry the case any higher up.

A New York professor of languages who amused himself on the board walk at Atlantic City by pinching women, was in turn pinched by the police and fined $15. To that extent he has added to his knowledge of sin tax.

A Chicago scientist has it figured out that the world will last at least 100,000,000 more years, instead of the 50,000,000 heretofore claimed. The period was extended probably to allow further time for the completion of the Panama Canal.

It is not difficult to relieve blind, bleeding, itching or protruding piles with Manzan, the great pile remedy. It is put up in collapsible tubes with nozzle, and may be introduced and applied at the seat of the trouble. Stops pain instantly. Sold by S. R. Biggs.

FACTORIES—WE NOW NEED.

During the past we have been content to lead an agricultural life and great has been our progress and development along these lines. But "in the course of human events" it becomes necessary for us as a people to get together and to institute factories among our people and thereby broaden out and diversify our occupations. As a matter of course this must follow sooner or later, it is bound to come.

The South has gone into the manufacturing business and North Carolina is fifth on the list. There are two hundred and eighty-seven mills in the State of North Carolina that manufacture cotton and woolen goods, and not a single one of these is in Martin county. It is a deplorable state of affairs.

We need to put on our thinking cap and think about the question of turning out the raw material into the finished product, through and through. It lies within the power of the owner of a knitting mill to supply the hosiery to the great bulk of the people of the county. The farmers of Martin county should be the owners of such a plant. They are the people who toil and sweat and they are the people that ought to benefit by that which they produce. These factories turn out big earnings and such an enterprise would tend to increase property, increase wages and net a handsome dividend.

The farmer would not have to have thousands of dollars to institute these factories, for as in union there is strength, we would naturally want the large and the small farmer to take stock and be benefited accordingly. Then we would have a strong company and all would be alive and up and doing for the interest of the company because for their own interest. We must start the ball a-rolling. We must get in the rut with the other progressive counties of the State.

Look at our sister counties, Edgecombe and Halifax. On the one hand we see Edgecombe with two cotton mills, one knitting mill and several cotton seed oil mills, manufacturing warps, yarns, hosiery and underwear; on the other hand we see Halifax with two cotton mills and four knitting mills, manufacturing cotton damask, domestics, underwear and hosiery.

Are we less progressive than these, our sister counties? No! We just have not yet realized what lies within our reach, what progress we might make as a manufacturing people. There is not a section of the State that is superior to us as to farming, but in the business of manufacturing we are in the dark. We can raise with good success cotton, peanuts and tobacco, but not one of these commodities is handled and re-handled so as to make them sell for just thrice the amount they sell for at present.

We believe in protection to this extent, that the native of our county shall get the profit that the outside mill man makes on the commodity that now goes out of the county, provided such a commodity can be handled by the county mill and sold for the same price that the outside mill man gets for it.

It devolves on thinking men to work out a system of organization—of factories—that will benefit the producer of the raw material. Machinery plays an important part in modern life, let it play the part in the solution of this question. Let machinery connect the farmer to the mill man, and then we will be equal to, yea, we will surpass the Northern man who has been manufacturing our cotton goods and re-shipping them to us and getting thrice, four times, as much as we got for the raw product, and justly so, for he used the machinery and beautified and polished it.

With our idle capital we can get the same machinery and thus take the Northern man's profit from him. Let's have mills.

Rate Regulation

The Aldrich-Allison amendment of the Hepburn railroad rate bill has been adopted by the Senate. Thus after five months of deliberation—an evidence of its ultra-conservatism—that body has acted, acted as it inevitably must act so long as the Aldrich-Rockefeller influence is dominant. Conferees will be appointed by both houses; there will be parleying and the making of concessions, and the Senate amendment, substantially as it is now, will prevail. This, notwithstanding the strong position taken by the House in adopting the Hepburn bill and the support of that measure by the President.

The Hepburn bill recognizes the right of court review, but it does not attempt to define the jurisdiction of the Federal Courts in such matters. The President wished to go even further, to "expressly grant a court review, but to distinctly limit it to two points, first, an inquiry whether the Inter-State Commerce Commission had exceeded its authority, and second, an inquiry whether the constitutional rights of the carrier had been violated." Thus, according to ex-Senator Chandler, favoring an expressly limited court review the President has joined the ranks of Aldrich and Spooner, Knox and Foraker, the avowed champions of a full court review, since they wish to allow the courts to fix the bounds of their jurisdiction. The grounds for their opposition to a bill defining the jurisdiction of the courts is, such an attempt would prove abortive, since the law would be pronounced unconstitutional. This is the same argument that has been effectively used every time Congress attempts to increase the powers of the Inter-State Commerce Commission. These champions of the railroads are so solicitous for an effective law regulating rates that they are not willing to take the chances of having the courts pass unfavorably!

In addition to their deep solicitude for the great masses of the people, this Aldrich quartet insist that their voices alone should be heard in the land when rate regulation is the theme. Only the friends(?) of an effective law should attempt tariff reform or rate regulation! As to the first, this statement was made before the Dingley Act was passed, and tariff reform is still in the hands of its friends, although many Republicans in the Central Western States are no longer willing to stand sponsor for this prodigy.

Senator Bailey very effectively met the constitutional objections to limited review when he called attention to the fact that the constitution only established one court—the Supreme Court—and "such others as Congress may from time to time establish." Thus all other Federal Courts inferior to the Supreme Court are creatures of Congress. "A breath (from whom) can make them, as a breath has made." This, then, being true as to these courts, Congress can definitely fix their respective jurisdictions as it has done since their creation.

All of this discussion—as to a review of the findings of the Inter-State Commerce Commission is prompted, on the one side, by the railroads in order to prevent the Commission from acquiring the power to fix a maximum rate, and also, to force parties seeking relief to resort to the long, tedious, expensive and, often, unsatisfactory method of adjudicating such matters in the courts.

The friends of rate regulation can only hope for the best; they should "beware of the Greeks bringing gifts" however. The people have never received anything from this source, why expect it now? If the House adopts the Aldrich-Allison view, the country must submit for a season. If this measure proves to be evasive and ineffectual, the righteous indignation of a people demanding tariff revision and rate reform—two measures that go hand in hand, for both are phases of the trust question—will be visited upon the party that heard but would not heed the cry of the people.

How to Ward off Old Age.
The most successful way of warding off the approach of old age is to maintain a vigorous digestion.
