MR. CORNELIUS W. KELLINGER

Died at His Home in Norfolk Suddenly—An Earnest Christian Gentleman -- Well known in Williamston -- Buried on Wednesday.

A dispatch received here early Tuesday morning, announced the death of Cornelius W. Kellinger at his home in Norfolk the night previous. The health of the deceased had been delicate for several years, but by careful attention on the part of a devoted wife and son, the hand of death had been stayed. He was seventy-two years old and was a Carolinian by birth, having been reared in Elizabeth City. There he married and reared one son, but he was bereft of both years ago. Later in life he made his residence in Norfolk, engaging in the commission business. There he married Miss Fannie Biggs, daughter of the late Judge Asa Biggs, and sister of Mrs. M. C. Crawford of Williamston. One son, Frank, was born to them, who with his mother survive him.

Mr. Kellinger was a splendid type of the Christian gentlemen, a devoted member of the First Street Baptist Church and an earnest advocate for everything that stood for the good of humanity. Friends in Williamston will miss the warm clasp of his hand and his proverbial good humor.

The funeral services were conducted from his late residence, 153 Duke street, Norfolk, on Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Rev. Sparks W. Melton, D. D. conducted the services. Many friends and acquaintances in Williamston deeply sympathize with this bereaved wife and son in their hour of trial.

Ganderbone's Forecast

For
SEPTEMBER

(Copyright 1909, by C. H. Rieth.)
Whenever that Great prodigal
Prosperity
Concludes that home
Has some attractions
Over husks
And choosing
Evermore to roam,
And turns his face
Toward the place
Where first he saw
The light of day,
And where the lamp
Has faithfully
Been burning since
He went away—
Whenever, as we
Said before,
His trousers are
The worse for dogs,
And he would eat
His breakfast food
With better company
Than hogs,
And finally
Makes up his mind
That having had
His little fling,
He wants to see
The old homestead,
And mother,
And that sort of thing—
Whenever he feels Equal to
The humble pie
And kindly chaff,
By thunder,
We will wager him
He never saw
A fatter calf
Or one to
Better purpose fed
Than we've got
Out behind the shed.

The old Romans tried to make September the seventh month, as its name indicates, but this brought Labor Day around at a season when capital was at the seashore and could not be impressed by the parade, and it was subsequently made the ninth month. Domitian the tyrant was among those who complained of the misnomer, and he gave it his own royal name of Germanicus; but as soon as he was in Africa the reigning Emperor, Bigbillius, reversed the policy and restored to the month the only name in the calendar remaining to use as it was in the beginning.

The curtain will rise cautiously, discovering a schoolhouse in the foreground and a small boy in open-seat pants concealed in the tall grass at the left. Mr. Taft will be pounding his ear under a bush on the right, and Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Ballinger will alternately chase each other across the stage at the rear. In the remote background a group of football players will be putting in fall hair, and farmers will be passing to town with their crops along the extreme right side of the stage and returning in automobiles on the left. After the preliminary pantomime, in which the teacher will dash out of the schoolhouse and catch the boy, Mr. Taft lay his other ear on the anvil, and several aeroplanes pass over, the consumer will come out and sing "Listen to a Pencil on My Ribs."
And then the big show will begin, and summertime will scoot, the quail will do a trial trill upon his magic flute, the calf will hoist his tail aloft and jump from hill to hill, the dread mosquito will confess and fall upon his bill, the birds will call the moving van, to warmer climates bound, and the first acorn will fall and raise a welt upon the ground.

It is a very pleasant thing
To think upon the Fall
And what a comfort probably
It will be to us all,
To think upon the cider press,

WRONG TYPE OF TOBACCO

Farmers in East Carolina Must Grow Heavier Tobacco -- Lemon Colored Weed Not in Demand as Formerly -- Change the Method of Priming.

For the last few years it has been perfectly apparent to every close observer of the sales of tobacco on the western North Carolina markets that thin white tobacco was growing less and less in demand. During the first few years of tobacco culture in this section of the State, white, or what is known as lemon colored tobacco was in greatest demand and sold for fancy prices, but for some cause the demand for the manufactured product made from this type of leaf began to drop off. In the meantime, stimulated by the higher prices of white tobacco, farmers devoted their chief attention to the production of this tobacco, with the result that more of this type of tobacco was made than there was demand for and consequently the price fell off.

Farmers learned from experience that the highest type of white tobacco was made by priming off the tobacco early and curing it a peagreen color which changed after lying in bulk a few weeks to a very beautiful light color. This method was practiced to such an extent that since 1900, although the crop is now not transplanted much, if any, earlier than it was then, yet it is taken off the hill and cured from fifteen to thirty days earlier. This type of tobacco for the last two years has hardly paid the cost of production and as most of our farmers made this type of tobacco, it will be seen that it has been, to say the least, an unprofitable crop.

We must change our methods. The manufacturers tell us they want a heavier, richer and riper tobacco. They have paid good prices for such of this tobacco as we have made.

A change from present methods certainly cannot harm us, for we are making nothing by growing the thin, white, chaffy tobacco.

It is easy enough done. When the tobacco is about knee high it should be primed high and the primings thrown on the ground. Then top low in accordance with growth and vigor of the plant, let it stand on the hill until thoroughly ripe, and cure. The result will be an utterly different class of tobacco from that we are now making and a class the manufacturers say they want. Let's make what they want and a little bit less than they want. Grow all our home supplies. Market the crop in a seasonable and reasonable way and not throw it all on the market in three or four months. Do this and in my opinion it will be the medicine that will produce a cure.—O. L. JOYNER, Progressive Farmer.

Chili Sauce

Peel and cut up together three dozen large tomatoes and a dozen onions. Chop into bits half a dozen green peppers and mix with the tomatoes and onions. Stir together a teacup of brown sugar, five tablespoonfuls of salt, half a dozen teaspoonfuls, each, of powdered allspice, cloves and cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of ground ginger, and a saltspoonful of paprika. Put these spices into three quarts of vinegar, add the vegetables, mix thoroughly, and cook steadily for two hours. When sold, bottle and seal.
