

Select Seed Now

Fellow farmers, let's go into the field and pick out the ideal types of plants and gather the choice fruit ahead of regular housing, and store it away in a cool dry place for winter keeping. Then when the season for planting comes again, we must go through and re-select taking the very best seed for growing the next crop. Or if you choose, select just a small quantity and plant a seed path, out of which to gather seed for the following year. But somebody says: "Oh that's too much trouble, and what's the good of it anyway?"

Well as our Creator has given us dominion over plants as well as over animals, I regard it a duty we owe to Him as well as to ourselves to make the very best of what He has given. Just as the herdsman would choose the breed of animals to suit his particular condition and that he likes, so we should choose the variety of plants that is best adapted to our soils and climatic conditions and then breed to perfection. The stock breeder has to select and re select and keep selecting to get his herd up to ideal. Now if the stock raiser can be wise in selection, breed and keep his animals up to the perfect type, and sell them at fancy prices, then why will not the same rules apply to seed selecting? Then we could have perfect plants producing bountiful harvests which could be sold for fancy prices. Hundreds, yes thousands of farmers are doing it, who have no bigger heads than we have. But alas! they are so much better workers.

Let's wake up from our state of lethargy, shake off our laziness and see if we cannot catch up. We all know that we could not grow a sweet, juicy apple from the seed of a crab apple any more than the swine breeder could grow a good type of hog from a wild boar or a razor back. Neither can we grow a good stalk of cotton from the seed of a long, slender limber stalk of cotton with a small, sickly, shrunken boll. But some one says: "Why I get my seed from the barn and I make good corn and plenty of it." Well, I have this to say, that you have barren stalks and plenty of them.

I believe there was a Divine purpose in the creation of plants as well as animals, that of reproduction. Just as every beast of burden was intended to carry its load, and will do it if bred right, so every plant will make seed if properly grown.
