The Case Of Adam

A young English suffragette tells the following incident that recently happened at a meeting in the Scotch Highlands.

Speeches had been made to a large crowd. Questions had been replied to, amid applause. Imbecile young men making remarks about minding babies and mends-socks had been silenced. Then, just as there was a temporary lull before the putting of a resolution, a great bucolic Scotch voice from the back of the crowd rasped slowly in with the inquiry obviously the result of prolonged rumination:

"Wha made a mess of Adam?"

Many a good hanging prevents a bad marriage.-Shakespeare.

A second marriage is the triumph of hope over experience.-Dr. Johnson.

How To Keep Good Roads

We should have men living along our roads, whose duty it should be to drag the roads as often as they need it, to fill up and smooth over depressions before they wear into holes and ruts, and to look after and keep up the roads generally. Divide the roads into sections of stated lengths and let out the upkeep of each section by contract. Have a road inspector for each county, whose duty shall be to give his whole time to the inspection of the roads of the country and to report any nonperformance of duty that may occur. Require that the inspector be thoroughly qualified to fill his position. Require both contractors and inspectors to give bond for the faithful performance of their duty.

"What is everybody's business is nobody's business" is an old and true saying. Make the upkeep of our roads "somebody's" business and we will have good roads at less than what bad roads now cost us. We won't have them until we do.-Frank L. Butt, in The Progressive Farmer.
