We are publishing this week the Federal Game Law passed this year by Congress. A study of it should be made by these inclined to shoulder a gun and go forth. State laws allowing the killing of robins, etc., in certain seasons, are void now. Judging from this Federal law, there is very little game left for the sport of the hunter.

Unfortunate Condition

England today is mistress of the seas and her kingdom stretches so far that the sun never sets upon it in all the years. And yet she is at this moment in the throes of a conflict more difficult to decide than even that of the battles which she fought successfully. Property, life nor anything is safe from the acts of violence done by the English women who want the ballot. Instead of women they have become fiends, burning, attacking and humiliating the great men of the realm. Punishment does them no good—they pose as martyrs and would, no doubt, have made excellent food for lions in the age when Nero caused Christians to be devoured by the beasts. Such endurance and persistency as theirs if turned into the right channel, would be marvelous things for the uplift of humanity.

It is easy to decide that these women are not ready for the ballot. To put England at their mercy at the polls would be dangerous. The entire world is shocked at their acts, and though their chief leader, Mrs. Pankhurst, has been given a respectful hearing in America, we would prefer her absence to her speeches. Her one object in coming here, however, was to collect funds, as we seem to be "easy" for foreigners. The country will feel relieved when her ship disappears from the eyes of those on shore.

Reelected Secretary

At the sixty-ninth session of the Christian Missionary Convention, which was held in Asheville, Editor W. C. Manning was re-elected recording secretary, a position which he has filled for the past two years. The Convention will meet next year in Greenville. Mr. J. Fred Jones, of Illinois, was elected corresponding secretary and will come to North Carolina to give his entire time to evangelical work.
