BEGINNER MUST GO SLOWLY WITH SQUABS

Helmet Pigeons.

(By FRED A. SOTTER.)

Would a man raising breeding homers for sale offer a single pair to another if half the fabulous tales of profit were true? Most assuredly not.

A pair of mated homers can be raised to maturity, that is a breeding age, from squabs for a certain fixed sum, varying from two to three dollars per pair, depending upon the locality and the number of pairs raised at one time. When birds are offered for sale at a lower price than above stated look for the "nigger in the woodpile," for he is sure to be there.

There are many reputable firms selling and raising mated homers, but there are many disreputable ones, so the beginner must go slowly or else learn by experience to pick the good from the bad breeders—this often at the cost of many dollars.

The guarantees offered by so-called squab companies are often misleading and—it has been proved in the United States courts—it is sometimes very difficult to prove a misrepresentation even when everybody is morally certain that fraud was intended.

Consider well your own ability and pocketbook before putting a single dollar into breeding homers.

Raising squabs for market never did nor ever will make a man wealthy, without he puts every ounce of business ability he possesses into the work. If he expects to feed his stock or have it fed for him three times daily and then, at stated periods, gather the squabs, sell them and pocket the money, putting in his time telling his friends about his squab farm, he will find himself at the end of the month sadly in need of money for his feed bills.

Squabbing is just like any other business; it will bring nice returns for every dollar invested and will repay the squabber well for every ounce of energy he employs, but he must keep at it always. A single day of neglect will do more damage than a week of attention will repair.

The early days, when squabbing was in its infancy, were full of big profits for the squabber, even if he was a little "loose" in his management. Those days, wheat was cheap, and corn and all the domestic feeds; squabs, too, brought a fixed price per pair, regardless of color or weight of the meat.

Today, with wheat high and other feeds, in proportion, with squabs graded by the ounce in prices and by the color of the meat, every item of expense and attention must be carefully considered and made to help toward heavy, white squabs.

The lofts must have the best possible attention and position, with as warm an exposure as possible. They must be high and dry and well protected from weasels, rats, etc.

The birds must be carefully watered and fed three times every day, and the four or five hours of daylight left to the squabber when all feeding and watering is done are best spent watching for sickness in the lofts, and looking for the little omissions we all make.

Take care that the birds have plenty of nesting material, charcoal, salt, grit, etc., for their needs.

EXPENSIVE FENCES ABOUT POULTRY YARD

Poultry Farm Showing Houses to Accommodate Twenty-Five Birds on Each Side, With Lots Set Out in Young Apple Trees and Corn Growing Between the Rows.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE.)
Fences about the poultry yards mean an outlay of money, and this outlay is more or less continuous, as they must be maintained after being installed. There should be as few fences as possible dividing the lots and the yards, as land can be kept "sweet" more easily if not fenced, and fresh, sweet land is a valuable asset in poultry raising.

On good soil, a greensward may be kept up by allowing 200 to 250 square feet of land per bird. This means 217 or 174 birds per acre. More space is necessary on poor or light land. A larger number of fowls are usually kept to the acre where double yards are used and the land is frequently cultivated. Plymouth Rocks, and the other heavy meat breeds in small yards require fences 5 to 6 feet high, while a fence 6 to 7 feet high is necessary for Leghorns. The upper two feet of the fence for the latter may be inclined inward at an angle of 30 degrees, or a strand of barbed wire may be used on top of the regular wire to keep them confined. It is also sometimes necessary to clip the wing feathers of one wing of those birds that persist in getting out. A board or strip along the top of the fence is not advisable. Hens will often fly over such an arrangement.

Posts may be set or driven into the ground. They should be set 8 to 10 feet apart with common poultry netting, or 16 to 20 feet with woven wire. Corner posts should be about 8 inches in diameter, and be set 4 feet in the ground, while intervening posts may be 4 or 5 inches in diameter and set 3 feet in the ground. That part of the post which is set in the ground may be charred or treated with some wood preservative to advantage, while corner posts should be firmly braced or set in cement.

Trough for Pigs.
A good trough may be made for the little pigs out of a long, narrow, shallow box of any kind. Wet bran allowed to soak into the cracks will make it milk tight.

Why Italy Loves the Army.
The Italian soldier is not only severely drilled, but he is also expected to perform a good many duties not usually regarded as falling within the requirements of military service. It is considered incumbent on every man wearing the king's uniform to give aid whenever and wherever it may be needed for the protection of life and property, against crime, accident or disaster, and whenever a calamity befalls—such as the recent earthquake—the first move is always to send troops to assist the suffering. This is one reason why Italy regards her army with affection as her protection at home as well as her defender against foreign aggression.

Calm Resignation.
Reference having been made to beautiful resignation, Congressman Joseph J. Russell recalled an appropriate story.

During a dinner party some time ago, the congressman said, the topic turned to the conjugal state. Among the guests was a bachelor person.

"Speaking of marriage," eventually remarked the bachelor, "it seems that the longer a man is married—"

"The happier he is," impulsively broke in a spinster party with a hopeful glance at the other.

"I was going to say," resumed the bachelor, disregarding, "that the longer a man is married the less he seems to mind it."

From the Way It Acted.
Little Almee was learning to sew, and one day after vainly trying to thread a needle, she said: "Mamma, what do they call the hole in a needle?"

"It is called the eye, my dear," replied her mother.

"Well," continued Almee, "I'll bet this old needle is cross eyed."

Laudable.
"What is your idea in reorganizing the choir?"

HADN'T THOUGHT ABOUT THAT

Of Course Young Mother Could Only Reason That the Fault Must Be With the Scales.

The story is told of a young mother who, after her first baby had been born, hurried to a hardware store to purchase a pair of scales, that she might be able to keep tabs on the remarkable growth of her first born.

When she got them home and weighed the baby for the first time the little bunch of humanity did not quite measure up to her expectations and she promptly carried the scales back, stating that they were not satisfactory.

Asked by the storekeeper what the difficulty was, she replied: "I think the scales are not right. My baby did not weigh as much as I think she ought to."

"Did it ever occur to you," asked the hard-hearted seller of hardware, "that the fault might be with the baby and not the scales?"

She saw the point and kept the scales.—Brockton Enterprise.

Otherwise Not.

"Because I'm married."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Regular.
"Is Bronson a regular church goer?"
"Well, he goes every Sunday when it's raining too hard for golf."

Taking Papa Along.
The baggage master halted the family party and politely explained that under the new law the value of the contents of each trunk must be given.

After a brief consultation with her daughter, mamma pointed to her own trunk and said: "Please put this one down as containing one thousand dollars' worth of personal belongings. This one," indicating her daughter's trunk, "you may put down for eight hundred."

"How about this little one?" asked the baggage master, resting his heel on its top.

"Oh, that!" replied the lady contemptuously. "Ten or twelve dollars will cover that one."

"I see," returned the official. "Father's going along too."

A Scoop.
"I'm writing a history of the European war."
"But the war isn't over yet."
"That's where I get the bulge on the rest of the historians. I can put my book on the market the day after peace is declared, and they'll have to wait two or three months."

Pa Knows Everything.
"Father, what is a 'sepulchral tone of voice'?"
"That means, to speak gravely."

Post Toasties

There's a mighty satisfying flavour about these thin wafery bits of toasted corn.

So easy to serve, too, on a hot day, for they're ready to eat right from the package—fresh, crisp, clean. Not a hand touches Post Toasties in the making or packing.

Served with cream and sugar, or crushed fruit, they are delicious.
