Wall Street "Before and After" The Surrender

Senator Harrison drew two very interesting pictures, which he might well have called "Before and After" of the attitude of Wall Street toward the reactionaries last May and now. He told of the conference here on May 25 attended by J. Pierpont Morgan of the "House of Morgan" Class, Sabin, of the Guaranty Trust Company; C. E. Mitchell, of the National City Bank; William Kemp, of the Guaranty Trust Company; Paul Warburg, of Kuhn, Loeb & Company; H. C. McElwain, of the United States Trust Company of Pittsburgh; Benjamin Strong, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and Secretary Mellon, the second largest income tax payer in America today.

"They held their conference in the White House with President Harding," said Senator Harrison, "who was nominated at Chicago by the same reactionary bunch who wrote this law and brought it out into original and objectional form."

He then quoted from the New York Journal of Commerce on the May meeting at the White House.

"A new era in the relationship of the United States government and the nation's financial and business leaders is believed to have been inaugurated in the conference to which President Harding summoned several New York bankers on Wednesday night. These bankers returning yesterday from the meeting, which was participated in by representatives of the Cabinet, observed the customary reticence in discussing what had taken place. They did not, however, hesitate to show their gratification at the developments.

"One thing which Wall Street took extreme satisfaction in yesterday was the evident willingness of President Harding to learn. He admittedly is not an expert in financial affairs, but he is ready to accept advice and willing to be set right where he is wrong."

Senator Harrison then drew the Wall Street picture following the surrender of the Old Guard to the Progressive Republicans in the adoption of the Democratic amendments to the tax bill by quoting the Wall Street Journal of October 9, as follows:

"Compromise is justifiable when desirable ends can be achieved in no other way and no principle is sacrificed. The House and Senate Revenue bills were examples of compromise that accomplished at least an installment of tax amelioration. Prolonged surrender of Republican leaders is in no sense a compromise. It is a cowardly retreat before a gang of demagogues, euphemistically called an agricultural bloc. The amendments forced by the agricultural bloc contain not one germ of benefit to anyone, and destroy every benefit conferred by the original bill. The present surrender gives up everything that was of any practical benefit in that bill.

"Farther far would be the retention of the present law, with re-iteration of all promises, than a cowardly surrender of every principle, with no resulting benefit to anyone anywhere."

Senator Harrison emphasized the fact that the surrender of the Old Guard was in truth a Democratic victory by saying:

"If it had not been for the speech that was made by the distinguished Senator from North Carolina (Mr. Simmons), making the suggestions that he did, backed up by a united and militant Democratic minority in this chamber, I doubt if a single voice from the other side would have been lifted in opposition to the bill; and then the Old Guard would have just slipped it through and again the promise to the people, not to the special interests, would have been broken."

A New View of "The Old Man"

A youngster recently entered one of the leading stores in Williamston and fitted himself up with a $350 suit, a pair of toothpick tan shoes, a moss green hat and a speckled tie, then called for a cheap pair of pants for the "Old Man." The merchant showed him several pairs but they all proved too expensive until he brought out a pair for $2.00, whereupon the merchant asked who the "Old Man" was, and whether the "Old Man" furnished the money for this splendid outfit. When he found out that his surmises were right, the merchant shamed the youngster so badly that he finally bought the "Old Man" a pair of pants that sold for $3.50.

Hoping that some young man may get a thought from the above occurrence and that will stop thinking of his Dad as the "Old Man." The clipping below is from The Silent Partner an douches upon the same question:

"He may wear a last year's straw hat, his finger nails may need mending; his vest may hang a little loose, and his pants may bag at the knees; his face may show signs of a second day's growth, and the tin dinner bucket he carries may be full of dents and doughnuts; but don't you call him "the old man." He's your father."

For years and years he has been rustling around to get things together. Never once has he failed to do the right thing by you. He thinks you are the greatest boy on earth bar none, even though you plaster your hair back, wear smart clothes, smoke cigarettes, and fail to bring home a cent. He is the man who won the love and life partnership of the greatest woman on earth, your mother.

He is "some" man and not "the old man." If you win as good a wife as he did, you will have to go some, boy."

NEWS LETTER FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

The "unbottling" of the port of Wilmington, long almost inaccessible for motor traffic from the rest of the state will be the material result of contracts let by State Highway Commissioner Frank Page on bids opened in Wilmington. Eight construction projects are involved and an expenditure of $568,000.

Bridging six miles of swamp between Wilmington and Clinton, in Pender county, removing the last link of impassable roads, and the building of 13 miles of gravel road between Whiteville and Lake Waccamaw in the Wilmington-Charlotte-Asheville highway the principal projects included in the batch of jobs let. Both provide for the elimination of pieces of road that have been the terror of motorists for years.

One hundred and ten contracts offered-bids on the eight projects advertised for the third district and in the opinion of Commissioner Page had an important bearing on the extremely low figures at which the work was let. The totals fall about 20 per cent under the previous cost of construction of the type called for in the contracts.

Winning out the new bidders from among the 110 who offered to build the roads and bridges let yesterday required the work of tabulation was completed since Monday. Mr. Page brought all the bids to Raleigh with him Monday, and the work of tabulation was completed yesterday. Many of the contractors came to Raleigh to watch the progress of their bids.

Two bridges among the projects form important links on the Wilmington-Raleigh road. One of these is over the Little River between Cumberland and Harnett counties, on the LaFayette highway, and the other over Black river between Sampson and Lenoir.

Duck Hunting on the Coast
It will be of interest to the hunters and fishermen of the state to learn of the organization of a club that is providing facilities for duck hunting on the Carolina coast, as well as for the pursuit of deer, turkeys and other small game that is bound on the shores of Hogue sound.

An usual feature of the club is that there is to be a golf course on the club grounds, made possible by the fact that Russell island, on which the club house is to be located, is warmed by the Gulf Stream, providing a delightful all-year climate.

The combination of hunting facilities, fishing waters, golf links and a modernly equipped club house that is being erected, introduces in North Carolina a form of club life for the "out-of-doors lovers" that has heretofore not been approached.

From the details given, it is natural to assume that the membership is being limited. It is understood that a few devotees of sport in each of the larger central and eastern Carolina towns will compose the club.

THE COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER

(By Bob Adams)
Of all the sheets from East to West, the local paper is the best. Deep in our love and deep our debt to Record Journal or Gazette. When first I handed on this ball, a bit of flesh wrapped 'round a snail, it welcomed me with joy and pride my life has never justifiably followed me my whole life through, with words all kind and mostly true, and even after I am hoarse 'twill tell my best and hide my worst. When in Oshkosh or Wickiup I wander homesick as a pup, or if in foreign lands I roam, it brings me pleasant news of home. Across the sands across the sea, the old home paper comes to me. It is a friend both true and tried, and to it, gents, I put with pride; yea, I will hock my Sunday pants to pay up six years in advance.

PRESBYTERIAN MISSION NOTES

Rev. J. T. Wildman will preach at Hassell on the fourth Sunday morning and at Parmele at night.

MORE LOANS FOR FARMERS

The War Finance Corporation today announced that it has approved under section 24 of the War Finance Corporation Act, an advance of $235,000 to a bank in North Carolina for loans for agricultural purposes.

A COMMUNITY SERVANT

The local newspaper is the servant of the community, in which it is published but to be a good and efficient servant it must be fed by the people it serves. It is an institution of the town quite as much as are the school and the churches and quite as much entitled to support.

TOBACCO BREAKS RECORD YESTERDAY

Yesterday tobacco on the local market averaged higher than any day in this current week. It is thought by some few that the market has been a little weaker throughout the East ern section of the State. It may be true of some of the markets but the Williamston market has maintained the same average that it has made for the past few weeks.

Yesterday was the best day of the week and the sales opened very strong this morning.

FOUND HOME PAPER IN HEART OF THE ROCKIES

"Publishing a country newspaper reminds me of tossing a pebble into the ocean. We never know how far the circles which it sets in motion will reach," said Whitson Manley, publisher of the Plaindealer of Canton, N. Y., the other day, in speaking of "Subscribe for Your Home Town Paper Week," which is to be observed the country over a week of November 7-12. "I had a good reminder of this not long ago," he went on.

"One day there appeared in the Plaindealer office a short, stubby, robust man of probably sixty. I knew the minute I saw him that he came in from the big outdoors in some section. He told me that he had taken the paper for many years, probably forty, even since he had left Canton where he was born. He told me where I would find the paper going and I found it. His post office was in a little town way out in the Rockies. He said he had come back to the old town to live. He paid what he owed me a yearover for good measure, and then he sat down and I knew something was coming.

"Forty Years in the Mountains." "Say," said he, "newspapers are great things. You never can tell what they are going to do for you. I have been a pebble out in the mountain for forty years, making my trips, and the little burro, about once in six months. There were a lot of long jumps between houses. For fifteen years I had been going out of my trail, about five miles to one side, to sell to a family that had moved in. You get rather well acquainted with people. I see them once in six months for that long, so when I got there one afternoon and didn't find anyone home—just the door unlocked, as all doors were there—I went in and made myself comfortable and when supper time came I didn't hesitate about hunting around for grub. And while I was doing it I found a copy of the Plaindealer on the kitchen shelf, and one or two more around the house. The Plaindealer, mind you, the paper I was taking right from the old home town! And I wondered who the fifteen-year-old friends of mine were. I suddenly realized we had never talked over our pedigrees any."

"When the family got home that evening I asked questions, and what do you think? That wife was a sort of grandmamma of mine. She hadn't heard of her old piece of stubbing around in the rocks of the Rockies, and I hadn't ever heard that anyone related me had ever married and was out there living under another name. Your paper introduced us to each other. I just thought you might like to know about it."

TUBERCULOSIS AMONG INDIANS AND NEGROES

The Indian population in North Carolina is woefully small as compared with a few score years ago when the Indian stalked through the virgin forest, monarch of all he surveyed. The bare majority of our Indian population is confined to one county, that of Robeson, where a few less than 1000 red men of the Croatan tribe are engaged in ganful occupation, primarily farming. Less than 3,000 will be found in all other counties of the State, Swain and Jackson being the only counties with any appreciable number.

The belief has been prevalent for years that a great number of "sucky friends" bite the dust" every year from tuberculosis. That this is true as regards North Carolina is evident from the report recently issued by the Bureau of Vital Statistics. With a population of 11,824 in Robeson, only 12 died during 1920 from tuberculosis. This gives a death rate of 101.4 per hundred thousand, which is practically the same as the death rate among the white population only two years ago.

In Robeson county there were 100 deaths from all causes among the Indians. Six of the number died from tuberculosis. There are many counties in North Carolina with an equal number of deaths, where we find the percentage of deaths from tuberculosis among the white population larger.

The real menace of tuberculosis in North Carolina is not from the Indian, but the negro. With a colored population of 763,407, we have more deaths from tuberculosis among the negroes than we do among the whites, regardless of the fact that the white population is 2 1/4 times larger than the colored. By comparing the death rate for negroes, which is 188.1 with the rate of 81.2 for the whites, some idea of the destructive effect of tuberculosis on the colored man will be seen.

The North Carolina Tuberculosis Association proposes to use a portion of the receipts from the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas seal to employ a clinic physician for work among negroes, to the end that the cases may be found early, treatment provided for as many as possible and that every case discovered may be so instructed and regulated that he will not communicate the disease to others, either white or colored.

Harris Pays Supreme Penalty Despite His Friends' Efforts

Progressive West Again In Saddle

All the indications are at this writing that the progressive West is again in the saddle a sit was in 1912. The differences within the Republican party then are the difference within that party now. It is the Old Guard reactionary group, dominated by predatory corporate and financial interests, seeking only special privileges, against the liberal and progressive element representing the great producing area of the west.

Of the 60 Republicans in the Senate 33 are from the west, and it is therefore apparent that if the progressive west will stand together, it can, with Democratic assistance, change the whole trend of legislation at this session from reactionary to progressive. Whether the Progressives will retain the advantage they have gained will be demonstrated later when the railroad loan bill of $500,000,000 comes up, together with the War Loan funding bill, a most sinister reactionary and hitherto unheard of piece of legislation, in that it confers upon the secretary of the Treasury sole power to do as he pleases with $11,000,000,000 of war loan debts and the absurd Fordney Tariff bill in the interest of the manufacturing class and detrimental to agricultural interests generally; also when the conference shall take place on the pending tax bill. This much now seems certain. Either the Old Guard must go on surrendering or the Progressive Republican element of the west must again submit to be ejected and fooled if the party is to be hell together.

The Progressive Republicans have taken a long time to assert themselves. They have permitted not only the interests of the west to suffer but the whole nation as well for the last three years as a result of their reconciliation with the Old Guard reactionary element.

If they shall again desert the great agricultural interests of the west for party and partisan advantage through that unholy alliance or logical result will be that they will forfeit the confidence of their own section and what ever advantage they may win in the meantime.

There are always about 200 late comers, so that before the college year is over the University could have nearly 1,800 students if it could take care of them. But it cannot. Living quarters, classroom space and eating facilities are strained to the utmost.

The cornerstone of the first of the new buildings to be erected with the money voted by the 1921 legislature was laid by the Grand Lodge of Masons last week. It is hoped that within six years the University will have accommodations for 3,000 students. The rate of growth in the number of high school graduates in recent years make it certain that there will be that many applicants by 1927.

One factor that increases attendance so rapidly is the expanding opportunity for poor students to support themselves while they get an education. The University maintains a self help bureau that finds all sorts of jobs for young men. Several hundred each year their expenses in whole or in part while at Chapel Hill.

Under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain deed of trust executed to me the undersigned trustee by C. P. Page and C. H. Colwell dated the 30th day of October, 1919, and deed of trust being of record in public registry of Martin county, in book B-2 at page 347, and the stipulations therein contained not having been complied with and at the request of the owner of the note secured by said deed of trust, I will expose to public sale in front of the court house door in Williamston, N. C., on the 21st day of Nov., 1921, at 12 o'clock, M., for cash to the highest bidder the following described real estate:

All those certain tracts of land lying and situate and being in the county of Martin and State of North Carolina near the town of Williamston and being tracts Nos. 4 and 5 on plat of land owned by Paul Simpson—known as the Plenny Peal farm as surveyed and platted by A. Croy, Engineer. Plat which is of record in Martin County public registry in book 1 at page 498 to which said plat reference is hereby made for a more perfect description. Tract No. 4 contains 32 acres and tract No. 5 contains 28 3/10 acres.

This the 20th day of October, 1921.
