

MOTHER GOOSE LADY MAKES FINE LECTURE

One of the outstanding features of the Chautauqua was the lecture of Mrs. Helen B. Paulsen of Chicago, the "Mother Goose Lady," who came with a wonderful message on "Mother Goose in Your Town" which was made most interesting for young and old by illustrating each step of her subject by the use of Mother Goose dolls.

It has been especially noticed this season that the hangings and lighting effects have been very good; different colored cloth curtains and awnings, some with striking borders, have been made most attractive by vari-colored lighting effects. On this evening when Mrs. Paulsen was introduced the curtain rose disclosing a table on which were arranged in groups quaintly dressed dolls, appropriate representatives of the Mother Goose rhymes used in the lecture, from "Baby Bunting" up to "The Lovely Lady." And there stood Mrs. Paulsen herself, smilingly, by the table of dolls, herself a "Lovely Lady" to whom the audience listened with rapt attention as she so beautifully took them through this fairy land of characters which by their application became the everyday beings with whom we are associated.

On one shelf, the higher were arranged the dolls representing human law—right, which nothing can change on the second shelf was legal law, resulting from environment, habit and association; here we found "Jack the Piper's Son, who stole a pig and away he ran." Mrs. Paulsen told how from babies—the "Baby Bunting" on the top shelf of human law and right, many children were directed toward this goal of legal law unthoughtfully, some by parents who failed to see that their directions to the children were carried out. Know what you expect of the children and get it by training them to a ready response and willing action accordingly, impressing valuable principles for their after life.

Among the dolls were "Father Time," "King Cole," representing control and justice; "The Queen of Hearts representing mercy; "The Three Evil Witches," gossip, the smiling witch and the grouchy witch were also there as was "Mischief." The smiling witch was always present where there was drink and dissipation, while the grouchy witch was connected in a dependent manner with everything mean, except what was attended to by Gossip. It was pointed out when introducing "Mischief" that willful wrong-doing often followed in his wake. And there were "Jack and Jill" in an argument—the surling one—which is after all the budding of leadership.

Love is law, keep the child close to you; let him be not afraid to come to you with his troubles; do not harden their souls, keep them sympathetic, responsive and give them honest answers when they come to you in the storm period of evil.

"For every evil under the sun,
There is a remedy or there is none;
If there be one seek until you find it,
If there be none, never mind it!"

In the seventh and eighth grades and in the high school age one finds the "Maries, quite contrary." You never know just what to expect of them, sometimes they are stubborn, and always have ideas of their own, she may wear her nose above her knees, or "roll her own;" in her garden there are cockshells of which she is aware and doesn't pull them out because she knows you all wish them out, and anyway, what does it matter if there are a few cockshells, if you are holding the reins understandingly? Hold them, probably laxly, but be on the job and stay there. Here Mrs. Paulsen spoke with much human understanding of this particularly difficult flapper age, and gave many instances from life, which had come under her own observation and into her own life.

There, too, was "Jack, the Giant Killer," representing the 15-year-old who always did such wonderful things in his own mind, and who was loved by his own folks, but not likeable, because of his contentions.

Then she led in a very attractive manner on up to the "Prince Charming" and "Sleeping Beauty" age of gallantry an dove, which needs to have been attended through all the earlier "Mother Goose" stages with the proper environment and training to now be able to choose wisely and well, and that they may pass through to "The Lovely Lady" period of life, wherein there are grandchildren to whom this "Lovely Lady" means much and if it should be the spinster "Lovely Lady" what a wonderful thing to be "A Lovely Lady" to the children of the community. STORIES OF GREAT INDIANS

LITTLE TURTLE VS. HARMAR AND ST. CLAIR

ONCE upon a time George Washington flew into a towering rage. News of the defeat of Gen. Arthur St. Clair had just been brought to him. Striding up and down in his office, Washington stormed to his secretary: "My last words to him were, 'Beware of a surprise!' And now he has allowed that fine army to be cut to pieces and his soldiers butchered!"

Had his excellency told the unfortunate general that he was being sent against the craftiest and most energetic Indian leader in the country, Little Turtle (Michikiniqua), chief of the Miami, the result might have been different.

At the close of the Revolution, all efforts to pacify the tribes in Ohio and Indiana having failed, the government sent an army of 1,500 men under Gen. Josiah Harmar against the Confederation of Miami, Wyandottes, Pottawatomies, Ottawa, Shawnee, Delaware and Chippewa led by Little Turtle.

The next year Washington sent St. Clair. Little Turtle launched a furious attack upon the general's camp early one morning and forced him to retreat. The retreat became a rout. For four miles the screaming savages raged at the heels of the stampeded army. Then Little Turtle stopped the pursuit. "We have killed enough of the white men. Let us now divide the spoils," he said. Next to Braddock's defeat, St. Clair's was the worst in the history of our Indian wars. He lost 630 killed, 280 wounded and all of his supplies.

Then "Mad Anthony" Wayne took the field and offered the Indians either peace or war. Little Turtle counseled peace. "We have beaten the enemy twice, but we cannot expect the same good fortune to attend us always," he told his warriors. "The Americans are led by 'Black Snake,' the chief who never sleeps. Something whispers to me that it would be well to listen to his offers of peace."

One of the chiefs accused Little Turtle of cowardice. Stung by the undeserved charge, the Miami chieftain consented to attack Wayne. His fears were justified for "Black Snake" defeated them so badly at the Battle of Fallen Timbers in 1794 that the next year they sued for peace.

When Little Turtle signed the Treaty of Greenville, he said, "I am the last to sign it and I will be the last to break it." He kept his word. After that he led his people in the ways of peace and worked for their betterment. Little Turtle died July 14, 1812.

MR. GEO. HOLDERNESS STRONG FOR CO-OP MARKETING

Mr. George Holderness of Tarboro, President of the leading bank of Tarboro, Secretary of the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, a director of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company, and one of the largest farmers of Edgecombe county was in town Thursday and expressed his views on the cooperative marketing of farm products. He has made an extensive study of the principles of cooperative marketing from the places where it has been operating for several years. He stated that the two brightest spots on the globe during the world-wide depression following the world war were Denmark and California, where marketing of farm products is done through a cooperative association made up of the growers. In Denmark this system has been in operation for forty years and in California for the past several years and the raisin growers of that state are the best off financially of any farmers anywhere.

Mr. Holderness has also gathered data from banker friends on Kentucky and Ohio who helped to finance the Burley Association and who have seen the actual results of the system and they are men who were best able to judge the economic situation in their states and communities. In some instances they were just like the farmers, they were doubtful of the system as first but they have seen it in its operation and they now warmly praise it. They say that it has not only helped the farmers in these two states but it has also helped the banks and the merchants through the farmers.

impressed this feeling of community responsibility for our girls and boys; she appealed not only to the grown-ups saying not only was it your business to help steer the girls and boys of your community clear of evil, but concluded with an appeal to the boys and girls themselves and asked the young men of the community to be men in every sense of the word, and help to keep our girls in the proper atmosphere.

She ended by speaking of all the progressive steps made by women, and the partnerships in the business world so successfully carried out, but glorified in beautiful language and thought the supreme partnership of the home.

MARTIN COUNTY FAIR BEGIN OCTOBER 2ND

MARTIN COUNTY FAIR
The Martin County Fair will open October 2, 1922.

The Fair Association has contracted with Messrs. Zeidman and Poie for the midway shows. These gentlemen carry the best and cleanest shows in circulation.

The races this year will not only be trotters and pacers, but there will also be special county races. The people in the county who have speedy horses may enter them.

The essential thing in a fair is good exhibits and those expecting to earn a premium must produce the goods. Now is the proper time to get your crops, live stock and fancy work started. Practically everything that will draw a premium at any fair this year must have a long period of attention and preparation.

The fair association expects to put on a larger premium list than ever and the Fair has every promise of being better than ever.

GET YOUR EXHIBITS READY FOR THE STATE FAIR

Raleigh, May 31.—Now is the time for the county commissioners or the county farm agent of every county to begin consideration of the exhibit of farm products at the state fair this fall, for the fair authorities have so increased the premiums offered for these exhibits that it will be very much worth while to put them on. The new management of the fair association is laying special emphasis on the agricultural side of the fair, and is very much interested in getting as large a number of these exhibits as possible.

In order to attract more and better exhibits the Fair Association is offering $3,342.50 in prizes for this class of exhibits. The first prize will be $600 and the seventh prize is $100. In addition to these the exhibits which are declared meritorious by the judges will be awarded fifty dollar prizes. It will be seen, therefore that the prizes offered will more than make care off the expenses incurred in making the exhibits.

Since the main object of the fair is to instruct those attending, and not for entertainment purposes only, the superintendent of this department, Prof. C. B. Williams, of the State College, has planned to award the premiums partly on the basis of their educational value. Thirty points will be allowed for the educational value of these exhibits. If the exhibits can be arranged so that it will show, for instance, the results of proper selection of seed corn on the quality and yield of corn, the effects of spraying fruits, the results of the use of 36-gauges and other things along this line, it will score thirty points as a starter towards the hundred points allowed for the perfect exhibit. Another thirty points will be allowed for field crops.

All exhibits will be allowed a space 16 by 32. Reservations of this space may be made under the direction of the county agent or some authorized agent of the county commissioners. Since some action may be necessary on the part of the county board, those interested in having their county represented in these exhibits, should take the matter up with their respective boards as early a date as possible. Arrangements will be made to take care of as large a number of these exhibits as possible, for the fair would like to see every county represented.

DIPHTHERIA DEATHS ARE ON INCREASE

Because there has been an increase in the number of deaths due to diphtheria within the last few weeks, the health department has issued a warning to the public. The number of deaths due to diphtheria within the last three years, from 242 in 1919 to 286 in 1920 and 365 in 1921, and appeal is being sent out by the N. C. State Board of Health to every physician in the state and to the mothers in many sections by letter and through the press, to begin immediately to take steps to lower the death rate from diphtheria and croup.

There has been a gradual increase in the number of deaths from diphtheria and croup in the registration area the last few years but that should be no consolation to the physicians and public who have placed the state from the one that had about the highest death rate from typhoid in the south to almost the lowest.

The number of children who will die from this disease in 1922 depends upon the promptness of parents in calling doctors in suspected cases of sore throat, the immediate administration of sufficient doses of anti-toxin, the early reporting of cases and strict observance of quarantine.

However, the best measure to control the disease is to give every child between six months and six years 3 doses of toxin-antitoxin. As it takes several months for the effects of this treatment to be established, now is the time for the mothers and doctors to act.

Very truly,
Wm. E. WARREN, M. D.

HOW CAN WE KEEP UP TRAFFIC ON WASHINGTON ROAD?

What are going to do to keep up traffic on the Washington road? Would it pay to have a track open along the way? A few feet of land might be rented from the farms along the road and traffic would not have to stop a day.

If we figure the additional mileage the farmers and others will have to haul their produce and the number of miles the public will have to make in detours and add to it the loss in trade that will go to the other towns they will largely overbalance the cost of maintaining a track along the road side.

And merchants, remember if the public gets the habit of trading at a certain place it is hard to get them broken of the habit. So, if they can go somewhere else easier than they can come to Williamston for the next several months we will feel the effects for years to come.

CORN FOR SALE: AT $3.50 and $4.00 per barrel, at my farm, C. B. Harrison, Phone No. 96. 5tp

The securing of one bank president's signature to the growers contract by the president of another bank in the same Virginia town, the signing of the contract by another bank president and the unqualified endorsement of the Exchange in an open letter by the cashier of another bank during the past week, are some of the evidences that the Peanut Growers Exchange is gaining ground daily.

To E. T. Holland, president of the Farmers Bank of Holland and chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Nansemond county, himself a large grower, goes the honor of securing the signature of Dr. Job G. Holland, President of the Bank of Holland, Holland, Va., and one of the largest farmers in Nansemond County. In addition to securing to securing the President of the other bank in his town Thursday afternoon, Mr. Holland also secured nine other growers, one of whom was B. D. Jones, a large grower and most influential man in his section. The other banker to sign last week was W. P. Wilson of Rushmere, Va., president of the Merchants and Farmers Bank of Smithfield, Va., and one of the largest growers in that whole section. To E. E. West, a large and influential neighbor, goes the honor of securing this bank president's signature.

Among those who attended the big rally in Suffolk on May 20th was L. E. Johnson, Cashier of the Bank of Dendron, and such a outstanding figure in his section that about two years ago when a large banking institution of Norfolk tried to capture him by a most tempting offer, his own people showed how much they appreciated him by making it to his interest to stay with them. What Mr. Johnson has to say of that meeting and his changed attitude towards the Exchange, and the great principles of cooperative marketing for which it stands is worthy of consideration of peanut growers and business men in the peanut growing counties of Virginia and North Carolina.

It was my good fortune to attend the meeting of the Growers held at Suffolk on last Saturday. It was on that occasion that I witnessed the finest spirit I have ever seen exhibited by any people for any cause. Such courage and determination, coupled with the acknowledged conviction that the movement is a right and just one, can only result in a successful and permanent organization.

While I have maintained a neutral attitude up to this time, I am now out-and-out for the Exchange and all it stands for. All the influence I have in this connection will be used to help make the greatest possible success of this most worthy undertaking.

Those who have heretofore pursued a "Watchful Waiting" attitude, are now ready to sign contracts. I personally know of 10 large and prominent growers who have expressed their intention of lending all the influence they have to the movement.

All interests should unite and put the Exchange "Over" as soon as possible. It will then be recognized as a factor, and the despicable methods of the competitive interests will be forced into the background. One it is realized that the Exchange is an assured success, confidence will be restored in the future prosperity of the peanut growing counties.

The endorsements of these bankers swells the number of bankers who are now wholly committed to the Peanut Growers Exchange, which not only has five bank officials on its board of directors, but a number of other bank presidents and cashiers among its signers. It is because of the support the Exchange is receiving from leading business men and growers that it is confidently expected that several thousand growers will sign the contract in the campaign for additional signers which is now being put on.
