ASHEVILLE PROBABLY WILL HAVE CANDIDATE FOR THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNORSHIP

ASHEVILLE, May 21.—That Robert R. Reynolds, familiarly known as Bob Reynolds, veteran campaigner and political figure in North Carolina politics for the past 15 years, will be a candidate for the democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, seemed assured following recent developments in city politics of Asheville, home of Reynolds.

Robert R. Reynolds Probable Candidate for Lieutenant Governor

Grounded as a candidate for mayor of his home city and backed by some of its most powerful vote getters, he declined to enter the race on the ground that the job has no appeal for him. The impression grows that he has his eyes on the state office and that his ambitions of this type really kept him from seeking a place that would have kept him out of the larger field.

Reynolds was the first democrat elected in the district. He visited every voter's home, presented to every child under 12 a stick of candy with his name on it. He was a candidate for state senator last spring and led the field but retired when the second man called for a second primary, declaring party harmony meant more to him than personal success. After he took the stump for his opponent and spoke in every precinct for him.

BOY SCOUTS

Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

FATHER AND SON ARE SCOUTS

The story of a father who in his big-hearted way formed a partnership with his scout son, "to work together in scouting," and who both recently received the highest award of rank, the Eagle badge, at a court of honor in Salt Lake City, is a remarkable testimony of the spirit of comradeship that the work and play of scouting can develop between a boy and his dad.

"One day," says this father, "my boy said to me in a joking way, 'Dad, why don't you try and get some merit badges if they look so easy to you?' I told him I could get as many as he. So we started out. He would go to one examiner and I to another for the same merit badge, and for a while it was nip and tuck between us, but the new school of learning was getting the better of the old way with which I was familiar. One day we made up our minds to work together. We did not always agree on the same subject (we would not have been father-and-son if we had), but in the end we got our badges.

"In addition I have found a son that likes to let me know he thinks his dad is the only man in scouting, and I think my boy will grow up to be a real scout—one that can be depended upon. I have found the fountain of youth since becoming a scout, because a man never grows old if he mixes with younger boys. I believe there is no greater religion than to be of service to the boys. God bless the man who thought of scouting, and God bless the men who keep it up."

SCOUTS AND RADIO

Many boy scouts interested in radio are serving their communities by locally transmitting the valuable messages sent out by various departments of the United States government, and by encouraging other people to receive this helpful information. The Radio Amateur bureau, organized several years ago by the United States navy, to conserve the interest of the coming generation in radio activity, reserves on its membership list the numbers one to one hundred for scouts who have learned to send and receive code at the rate of 20 words per minute.

SCOUTS AND THE "TIGER"

France's "Tiger" is for the boy scouts. He belongs.

At one time when Clemenceau was passing through Alsace he came across a group of scouts on a hike. The premier stopped the sturdy lads and after a few words of praise on the work they were doing for "In Patrie" and future citizenship, inquired, "Do you know who it is that is talking to you?"

One lad stepped forward and with a salute said, "Yes sir, You're the Tiger and we're the Tiger Patrol."

Said Clemenceau, "I've always wanted to be a boy scout. Perhaps there is an opening here?"

When the Tiger patrols throughout France heard of this they clamored for the illustrious member, also, and now the veteran statesman is enrolled in every patrol bearing this name.

SCOUTS ARE PREPARED

One way in which Troop 9 of Takoma, Wash., interprets the scout motto "Be Prepared," is to shovel during the winter the snow from around city fire hydrants and sidewalks nearby.

AUTOISTS SCOUTS' FRIENDS

In Huntington Park, Cal., Troop 1 has made warm friends of autoists because of the patrol of one scout each day in Main street to watch for broken glass and other nuisance-producing articles.

NEW SCOUT FIELD'S CALL

The plan to establish a special field relation with remote territory which is a part of or under the protectorate of the United States, but not definitely a part of the 12 regions of the Boy Scouts of America, was proposed at a recent meeting of the national field department. The new field, called Division of Outlying Possessions, will include Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Guam, American Samoa, Panama Canal Zone, Philippine Islands and the Virgin Islands.
