THE BALANCE SHEET

As a matter of course, the people who want to make the State show in a bad light before the public, may continue the amusement of constructing their own castles out of the audacious figures on State finances. It is possible for them to construct it in several ways, neither of which might be right. The audit, in plain mathematics proves that the State can collect the revenues outstanding, meet its obligations and have a small balance in cash in the Treasury. There is no getting around that conclusion, as will be readily acknowledged by all except by the few who appear, for reasons of their own, determined to leave no possible opening unimproved for discrediting the record of their State. The exhibit stands for itself and will be quite likely accepted in the financial circles of the country as a balance sheet which shows the exact situation of the State from the standpoint of indebtedness and resources.

THE COTTON FAILURE

The Barrett house in Augusta, one of the largest cotton interests in the South, has evidently been on the wrong side of the market in recent days, for it has waked to find that it is "unable to meet its obligations," which is to say, it has found itself "broke." There must have been anticipation of what was coming, for the breaking of the news found all the Augusta banks well fortified against any possible emergency. Many firms will lose money by the Barrett failure.

but the business of the country will not be affected and the Nation will wag along as usual. It takes a bigger circumstance than the collapse of cotton brokerage firm to shake the stability of this country's finances.

HOW THINGS DO CHANGE?

Not so many years ago Villa was a much sought for man. The Mexican troops wanted him, the American Government wanted him and wanted him so badly that they spent around $100,000,000 in an effort to get him. The other day Villa died, and now we mourn his death.

The other day a body said if he were so and so, he would run things differently from what they are now. No doubt, but everyone has to render himself capable of running anything before he can attempt to manage it.

The howl about the cutting of the trees on Main street between the office of Dr. Saunders and the Moore house next to the Atlantic hotel is a loud one, but aren't the town fathers doing what they think best?

Numerous flint implements, bone harpoons, arrowheads, grindstones, chisels and tooth-headed spears have been discovered in the remains of a settlement at Honegardamos, Denmark. It is estimated the settlement is at least 7,000 years old. Although no human bones have yet been found, the excavators uncovered skeletons of elk, reindeer and other animals under a layer of peat several feet thick.

4 vital things a good oil does

Flow. Good motor oil flows quickly to the place it's needed—spreads evenly over the surface—gets there without fail in spite of heat or cold extremes.

Work. It holds the metal surfaces absolutely apart, no matter what the pressure, heat or clearance.

Wear. Above all it keeps on working, day after day—keeps a firm oil cushion longer in spite of hard service, dilution and water condensation—burns clean when it does go—gives greater mileage.

Cost less. Good oil costs less per mile if reasonably priced. It goes further and saves motor trouble.

Polarine is such an oil. It gets quickly to the spot, spreads evenly at all working temperatures, does its work thoroughly, outwears oils of inferior quality, yet costs little more per gallon and much less per mile. Buy from the Polarine Chart at your dealer's and get every vital quality in this all-round motor oil.
