

AND THE DEBT WENT UNPAID

A man started to a city last week with 100 sheep. He had given them the best of attention, for he owed one of the sheep for things he had already bought and the ninety-nine he wanted to exchange for things he needed and things he wanted. Along the way side one of the animals was lost. The herdsman gave a casual glance to find the sheep, but decided it would be too much trouble to find the lost one and gave up the search. The herdsman marched on with the remainder of the herd, thinking that he could well afford to leave off some of the things he had planned to buy. Upon reaching town he began to trade and soon bought a supply of food stuffs and things in that line to meet the family needs. Then he bought furniture and other similar things for the home and some expensive furbelows and silks, mostly silk hose a few pair of high heeled shoes, consisting principally of heels and buckles, then the drug store came in for their share of the sheep, when cosmetics for the entire family were purchased. After the car was sold and retired the memorandum of purchases was gone over the man found the last sheep was gone. Just then a gentle touch was felt and the man looked around and behold he saw the creditor who had trustfully extended credit in the long ago. The creditor said, "Well Mr. . . . the year has closed and we are trying to strike a balance, can't you help us?" "Oh well, yes sir, I intended to pay you today and I started with a sheep, but atone for that account I owe you and you know, that sheep got away and it is just impossible to do anything for you now."

We wonder after all if the rest of away of the sheep, dedicated to pay a debt, was a miracle.

Of course the barn of tobacco that gets burned is the one that belongs to the ones we owe and the half of the crop that the boll weevil gets belongs to the creditor.

Old Credit and Debt are bad things and they make people do many things of a strange nature.

DISTINGUISHED SON VISITS HIS COUNTY

Mr. T. F. Darden, of Wilmington was here for a few hours on Monday to see his aunt, Mrs. Irene Smith and to visit his old home town, Hamilton. He saw many changes in Williamston, it having been several years since he was here.

Mr. Darden is another Martin county boy that has made a success in life. He is one of the Vice Presidents of the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad in Wilmington.

He is a son of the late Len E. Darden, who worked for many years with the late William Carstarphen of this town.

MARTIN LOSES ONE OF ITS BEST CITIZENS

Mr. R. E. Early, of Oak City, was a visitor to The Enterprise this week. Mr. Early has sold his interest in the mercantile business of the Oak City Supply Company and expects to locate in Florida.

We regret to lose such citizens as Mr. Early and our best wishes for a splendid success go with him in his newly adapted state.

MANY TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE LEADER'S SALE

Yesterday the store where the Leader is located was crowded with people taking advantage of the wonderful bargains offered.

Among the many bargains were to be found two very unusual ones. To the first fifty customers, children not included, was offered to each a broom for the little sum of five cents. The other was sugar at five cents per pound.

We call the attention of our readers to the Leader's page advertisement in this issue for them to see the other many bargains offered.

THIS, THAT AND THE OTHER MOSTLY THE OTHER

Poultry club members in North Carolina entered eleven birds at the Madison Square Garden poultry show in New York City last week.

Buy farm seeds early, suggests agronomy workers of the State College. This gives you an opportunity to select a quality product.

Don't burn the woods trying to kill a few boll weevils. The woods will suffer much more than the weevil.

Tom Tarheel says that North Carolina seems destined to be a great poultry producing State. Everywhere he goes, now folks are talking about poultry, eggs, incubators and poultry marketing associations.

A board of agriculture has been appointed by the county commissioners of Chowan county to work with Farm Agent N. K. Rowell in developing a progressive program of agricultural development for the county.
