It is dead certain that all things will come to the other fellow if you sit down and wait. The bloodhounds went out in January to solve a Kansas murder mystery, and with the snow and everything, it was tough on the rabbits.

Production of cotton under boll weevil conditions is nothing more or less than a race between the setting of bolls on the plant and the multiplication of the weevils, scientists declare, and everything possible should be done to add the cotton plants in winning this race.

One of the first steps in furnishing this aid is thorough preparation of the soil. A good seed bed is necessary to obtain the best results and it should be prepared early so as to have a firm, smooth and well settled bed at planting.

Cotton rows should be from three to four feet apart, according to the fertility of the soil, and spacing in the row should be from eight to twelve inches with from one to three stalks to the hill. Tests under various conditions have proved that thick spaced cotton matures earlier and yields more pounds to the acre than thin spaced.

Further information on the subject of boll weevil control may be obtained from the county agent, state college of agriculture or the National Boll Control Association, Room 235 Wilmay Building, New Orleans, La.

Knowledge, comfort, wealth, even safety, are dependent on the highways over which men go. Every increase in a road's usability is a fourfold benefit. Today permanent highways have proved that they are both most usable and also ultimately cheapest. And the one material that makes this possible is Portland Cement, which, despite wide general demand, remains the cheapest of all manufactured products.
