TUESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1924.

Tomorrow marks the ending of the old year and while it seems young to us when we measure our tasks completed and those uncompleted...

Nineteen hundred twenty-four goes off the calendar to-morrow.

As we recount the days it has brought us and the opportunities it has given us, perhaps there is some uncertainty whether we are satisfied or not...

The fact is that a very large part of us are unhappy because we have not as much money as we want.

Regardless of what the past has brought, we must face the future. The only capital we can get out of the past is the experience it has given us.

We know we will have sunshine and rain in 1925. The seasons will come and go. The roses will bloom. The briars will grow.

It may be that we have made up our minds that this is an exclusive machine age and that everything must be done by a machine...

WHY A JOKE?

The New Year's Resolution is in its bloom right now. One swears off a bad habit of one kind, another one casts aside some other bad habit.

WHOOPIING COUGH No "cure" but helps to reduce paroxysms of coughing. VICKS VapoRub poisonous liquors, etc, and to give home and children more attention. It is a step that should be applauded by all.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

(By Mrs. A. O. Roberson)

The joyous Christmas season with its spirit of good cheer is by one and all acclaimed the happiest time of year.

In towns and lordly mansions in cotons and lonely dales.

Where'er Christian hearts are, the in some heathen land

A lonely one of sorrow or yet a pilgrim band

The gentle Christmas spirit with its kindly thoughtful cheer

Will bring a glad some thrill to child or aging seer.

In far-gone distant ages there breaks the Christmas morn

When Heaven and earth proclaimed that Christ the King was born

And down through all the ages in memory of His birth

This day is celebrated in joy, glad will and mirth

Love so loved the world, He gave His only begotten Son

To all the gift was given, His will excluded none

And thus the Christmas spirit generated in this way

In all God's chosen people endures unto this day

And strives in emulation, life's burdens to lift

With cheerful words of greeting and kindly deeds and gift

With mistle and holly the firelit homes are dressed

And happy hearts attend this day which God hath blessed

The raging storms resound without and sorrow weeps within

The spirit hovers in the air and in the hearts of men

It moves upon the distant seas o'er mountain tops and plains

And through all times, succeeding years its brightness never wanes
