Two Literary Societies

The Wilsonian Society was named for Woodrow Wilson, one of the great presidents our country has ever had. The Estharian Society was named for Queen Esther, an admirable character of the Old Testament.

Before these two societies were organized there was only one for all the students to get training in. There was no competition; no rivalry; interest lagged; it was hard to get the members to take part on the programs.

The truth is we had all gone to sleep on the job, and did not have a society worthy the name. But in 1923, we divided the high school and organized the societies just mentioned. Since that time we have had all kinds of pep and enthusiasm.

Each society renders a program each month. These programs consist of songs, stories, plays, recitation, playlets, and stunts. We do our best every meeting because we are each working for the "best." This cup is offered to the society making the best score during the year. It is a gift of Mrs. Julian Mizelle, who as

Over 34 years experience

Miss Gladys Foust was a member of our faculty in 1923. The two societies ran a close race last year, the Estharians winning the cup by only one point.

We think the work of the societies is a very important part of our school life. It is here that we learn how to conduct a public meeting. It is here we learn how to stand up and express ourselves. Sometimes we do not serve so cheerfully on the program, but we know that the training received in society will be a great help to us when we leave high school.—Virginia Hines and Martha Roebuck, editors.

Our Chapel Exercises

Much of the success of a day depends upon how we begin it. This is true in school as well as in every-day life. We have an assembly of the whole school three times each week. Our superintendent strives to make these assembly periods pleasant and at the same time instructive. From time to time different members of the faculty give us talks on good citizenship, the value of good health, and other topics of vital interest to all. We believe that "variety is the spice of life," and so does Mr. Ainsley, because he has something new for us every chapel day. For the past few weeks the grades have entertained with songs and stories.

All important announcements are made in Chapel.

By planning ahead it is easy enough to make this one of the most profitable periods during the day.—Margaret Hines, Eloise Ross, editors.
