Cooperation Still the Need

It is with keen interest that we watch the cooperation between merchant and warehouseman; this season. The meeting to be held by the Chamber of Commerce this afternoon will start the ball rolling, and we have good reasons to believe that this season will find warehouseman and merchant both working to a common

County Home Entitled to More Consideration

For how long the Martin County grand jury has reported on the conditions at the County Home, we do not know. But outside of a few and meagre necessities, we do know that we have fallen far short in doing what is needed at the Home.

Taking into consideration the financial condition of our County, what can be done to relieve the situation at the Home. To build a new home is certainly out of the question. To even furnish the few necessities is quite a job when the strings to the county's purse are stretched so taut that one little jerk will wreck it altogether.

But, the financial condition of our county should not be so far reaching as to cause humanity to live in the conditions in which our poor are now living. Conditions that are inconceivable, that would shock the most humble liver are to be found at our own County Home.

It is with stinging shame that we see the home in Nash county and the one in Wilson county and then to turn our thoughts toward our own County Home. When we look at those two model homes we wonder if they were built through the counties alone, or was some thinking person outside

An Unusual Case

Limiting the death of Mr. Tom Lilley to that channel where the medical science has charge, we find one of the most outstanding happenings that has ever been known to us. In a state of insanity Mr. Lilley shot himself, the ball entering the brain and lodging there, 54 days ago. Death was expected immediately, but the first few days following the shooting he became stronger and at several times insisted on getting up. This compared to another case known to us, but at this point Mr. Lilley's case varied from the other in that it became a dragging one while in the other case the person died a day or two after

Time Only a Relative Measure

As we heard the sentence passed on a man at the court house the other day, the term struck us not in the sense that the hands of a clock measure the revolutions of the earth, the moon or the stars but from the passage of time as it affects the human mind. There goes a man to prison for eight years. Surely enough at the end of eight years, if all goes well, he will be released, but will it be eight years to the prisoner?

What this country needs is few or needs. The key to success locks the door to excess. Only 20 cents per person is spent for soap each year in spite of the fact that Saturday night still comes every week.

"Feet of Clay"

"Feet of Clay" a picture at the Strand theatre last night struck us as being a mighty one in that it gave a view of life here on earth and an imaginary picture of what it is to be. The picture's setting in the world to come does not have to be taken as what will be; for to portray the great afterwards is beyond the power of all humans. The picture's setting was the thought of one or two men and probably no other one in the world

The Little Fellow Protests

Mexico through its president seems to take exception to the position taken by Secretary of State, Kellogg. She says the Kellogg statement is in essence an insult. It may be that the Mexican President is right; it is a little hard for a man who represents a big country to feel that he is on a level with the man who represents a little country. The same spirit too often prevails

The only thing worse than a grouch is a cheerful idiot. No wonder our hens look so mad. We eat three billion eggs every year. Rockefeller keeps books showing every penny he ever makes. Well, we are headed for a paper shortage—that's all.

If forest fires keep up long enough, we may soon be out of the woods. The best guide book to consult while on your summer tour is a pocket-book. The world is evidently growing better; already at least three American editors have conceded that Germany had a right to elect whom she pleased for president. Roldofo Goana, Mexico's champion torador, retires after slaying 1,807 bulls. If we only had a bull slayer in this country!

Ideals are queer things. They won't work unless you do.
