WHY PROHIBITION DOESN'T PROHIBIT

Is the liquor law harder to enforce than any other law? If it is really a fact that it is harder to enforce than other laws, then what is the reason? But for one reason the prohibition law would be the easiest of all laws to enforce. That reason is liquor has too many fancy and influential friends. Coming down to the real honest reason, everyone knows the "best people" can not prosecute the moonshiner and bootlegger who keeps them full of liquor.

Nobody especially blames a low-down fellow who sells liquor for cash to the elite. The whole thing hinges on one point: The so-called "best people" must be better people. If Uncle Sam could say to every officer of all kinds in the United States, "Be honest and decent"; to every church member, "Honestly help to enforce the law that promotes good morals and protects society"; and to every man who drinks, "change your ways," then the prohibition law would be enforced.

Liquor has too many friends in the trouble, and the folks who are the friends of liquor stand too high in government, church, and society.

You can not find any friends for the crimes of murder, rape, robbery, and arson.

The effort now prevailing to so modify the national prohibition law so that beer and light wines may be manufactured and sold is one of danger and would strike a destructive blow to one of the best movements ever undertaken by the American people.

It would be unfair to enact a law allowing foreigners, mostly Germans and Jews, to manufacture beer and wines. It would be better to abolish the entire law, allowing the American people to have their red liquor and apple brandy than to let foreigners have their beer.

The churches of this country could not do a more cowardly thing than to lie down on the job of enforcement. When a law is violated the public must suppress the crime and prosecute the violator. If the public commits the crime and shield the violator, then it makes the law hard to enforce.

When men who purchase liquor from bootleggers can arouse enough conscience in themselves to show that they are co-criminals, most of them will naturally quit of their own accord.

WATER TRANSPORTATION NOW COMING INTO ITS OWN

The port terminals and boat bill was defeated without mercy at the November election, 1924, by avaricious railroads and politicians, who wanted money and power.

Now, we see merchants from inland towns of eastern Carolina hauling goods to and from the little docks at Williamston, Washington, New Bern, and other water points.

Many goods are now being hauled from the one little boat line that now comes to Williamston, to Everetts and Robersonville, because they can save enough freight to justify trucking their goods and make savings thereby.

Kinston merchants who buy goods in Baltimore and other northern cities are now having them freighted to New Bern by the Carolina and Baltimore Steamboat line, and from there hauled to Kinston by truck and are saving 15 per cent, the goods being delivered to their doors instead of a freight depot, thereby saving drayage.

The propose the organization of another truck line extending from New Bern to Wilson, and passing through Grifton, Ayden, Greenville, and Farmville.

Eastern Carolina has made no greater economic mistake, nor has the politicians drawn the dagger nearer their hearts than when they failed to ratify the port terminals and boat bill.

DREADFUL PAINS

Georgia Lady, Who Had Lost Too Much Weight, Was Advised to Take Cardui and Is Now Well.

Columbus, Ga.—Mrs. George S. Hunter, of this city, writes:

"After I married, thirteen months ago, I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides during ... My side hurt so bad it nearly killed me. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks at a time. I could not work and I just dragged around the house.

"I got very thin—I went from 136 pounds down to less than 100. My mother had long been a user of Cardui and she knew what a good medicine it was for this trouble, so she told me to get some and take it. I sent to the store after it and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve.

"My side hurt less and I began to improve in health. ... The Cardui acted as a fine tonic and I do not feel like the same person. I am so much better. I am well now. I have gained ten pounds and am still gaining. My sides do not trouble me at all. "I wish every suffering woman knew about Cardui." NC-160
