

"From Biddies To Broilers"; Noted Farm Authority Tells of Profits To Be Derived From Sale Of Young Chickens In Spring

By G. A. CARDWELL
Agricultural and Industrial Agent for Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Co.

"If I can not do great things,
I can do small things in a great way."—James Freeman Clarke.

Chickens have a fascination for most people, in the back yard, in the pen, and later on the table; and "hen fruit," commonly called eggs, long since attained to a full partnership in the national breakfast dish of "ham and" or "bacon and."

But many a beautiful friendship has been completely shattered because of the lack of success in mixing chickens with flower beds or with vegetable gardens. Chickens always seem to desire to cultivate the beds and gardens at the wrong time; in fact, they seem to be unusually lacking in common sense. We are, most of us, acquainted with some fool hen, sometimes too well acquainted; and I think all will agree that chickens as gardeners are unreliable.

Don't get the impression that I am prejudiced in this matter of chickens; but I will admit that I have had some back-yard experience.

However, we must get on to the subject of this article, "From Biddies to Broilers."

As we have shown in previous articles, the farm income has been materially increased in many sections by the culling of flocks and sale of the culled chickens to carlot buyers. The prices paid per pound have been liberal in most cases, quality considered.

The carlot method of shipping poultry, in vogue in recent years, will soon be underway again, and it is hoped that the lessons learned from past experience will prove of value next season. Heavy poultry, in good condition, and not stuffed with grain at time of sale, is attractive to eastern city buyers. When we establish a reputation for having good poultry, these buyers will be anxious to get our stuff, and will bid high for it—just as high as market conditions will justify.

Early Broilers Profitable
It has been found that early broilers are a profitable venture when the American breeds are used. Baby chicks hatched around January 15th will, in ten weeks, average one and one-half pounds. Last spring early broilers, carlot shipments, sold for 50 cents per pound at the car door, and as late as May 45 cents per pound was paid at the car door. Basing their views on present industrial prosperity some writers are predicting that next March and April broilers will probably be selling for from 60 to 65 cents per pound.

To take advantage of this market producers must have brooders and take care of the baby chicks in a systematic way. Baby chicks can not stand cold, and if producers wish to put early broilers on the market next spring, they must hatch out or buy baby chicks early and care for them so that the market may be supplied at a time when highest prices prevail.

In buying baby chicks it is important that healthy stock be obtained. When the chicks are to be fed for sale as "assorted" or "broiler chicks" from accredited hatcheries.

Mr. V. W. Lewis, livestock representative, North Carolina Division of Markets, emphasizes the importance of the proper time in marketing livestock and poultry, in the following para graph:

"To get most out of livestock in the South, we must not overlook 'time' as a factor in marketing. This is very true with hogs, lambs, and poultry. Our climate will allow us to match profits with the better grain section. Study this carefully and lend your influence and support in starting this early boiler project where the farmers

"ACHED & ACHED"

Lady Says Her Back "Hurt Night and Day"—Least Noise Upset Her. Better After Taking Cardui.

Winfield, Texas.—"My back hurt night and day," says Mrs. C. L. Mason, of R. F. D. 1, this place. "I ached and ached until I could hardly go. I felt weak and did not feel like doing anything. My work was a great burden to me. I just hated to do up the dishes, even. I was no account and extremely nervous. My mother had taken Cardui and she thought it would do me good, so she told me to take it. My husband got me a bottle and I began on it. I began to improve at once. It was such a help that I continued it until after the baby's birth.

"I took eight bottles and I can certainly say that it helped me. It is a fine tonic. It built me up and seemed to strengthen me. I grew less nervous and began to sleep better.

"I can certainly recommend Cardui to expectant mothers, for to me it was a wonderful help. In every way I felt better after taking it and I think it is a splendid medicine."

Cardui is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. For sale everywhere. NC-162
