Address all communications to The Enterprise

The advertising scheme of the moving-picture trust seems to be working well, judging from the great gathering on each Wednesday night.

The scheme is to put tickets in the hands of merchants, who give a free ticket to the show on Wednesday night to each customer who trades 50 cents with them.

This scheme fills the picture hall and the streets with men, women, and children from everywhere.

The purpose of the advertising scheme is evidently to cultivate the movie taste to a larger number of people. Of course, the "free bate" scheme catches them. When the habit is formed, the film people know people will go, even if they have to sacrifice to do so.
