SUNDAY IN WILLIAMSTON

What the people did in town Sunday would be a hard question to answer fully.

Speaking from the religious side of the question, we get much pleasure from the day's experiences, because it brings us into contact with people of all ages and stations of life.

First is a view of a Sunday school, where we find a large gathering embracing what we call the best of our race, the children, the older ones, and then the old, all studying together, praying together, singing together, all praising God the Creator. There we saw men reaching toward the higher life reached only through the love of Jesus.

Hurrying from the Sunday school to a church where we heard the mellow tones of the pipe organ pealing out praise of the Lord, followed by hymns of praise, prayers, and thanks, and a sermon proclaiming the word of the Lord, that men might know and worship Him.

The next event was a memorial service, where men were filled with fraternal love inspired by the spirit of Christianity. Here we listened to a special choir singing songs of praise. The orator of the day spoke eloquently of the opportunities that man has to regain the favor of God through the friendly teaching of His Son.

Then a new opportunity to think, study, and worship presented itself in a large gathering of colored people in a Sunday school and church rally, where was found no less of the same spirit of worship as before. Aside from the regular Sunday school program they had on hand a special choir from Dardens and two special quartettes, each composed of four young colored men. When one was not in action another was—something doing every minute—and the fellow who says the negro is forgetting how to sing is mistaken. Much of the singing would have done credit to a refined and trained audience. There was no preaching, but much praying, in the program.

The religious day closed with the regular services at the various churches and a sermon by Mr. Herman Smith at the courthouse. Mr. Smith is a follower of Pastor Russell and preaches a doctrine of many changes from the old order of things. He greatly modifies hell; in fact, takes most of the fire out of it.

His doctrine seems to make the road pretty easy for man.

He classifies the better class of church members as such as will be priests and heirs with Jesus Christ; then comes the careless, wayward, thoughtless, who will be called from the grave in the judgment and will become a part of the kingdom on earth and who will build houses and plant trees, as we now do. There the preacher left them, in their paradise, though he did not give either beginning nor the ending of this marvelous condition or state of man.

Judas, according to this preacher, will never be called to the resurrection; that it is the purpose to destroy him, utterly, both soul (which he says is only the breath) and the body, just as the beast. He also puts in this class all those who sin against the Holy Ghost.

This doctrine gives man the opportunity to worship and serve God now and become a joint heir with Christ now in the heavenly kingdom or the chance to while the way along not so good and not so bad; die both soul and body until the trumpet of the Lord shall sound, when all shall be called from the grave to reinhabit this earth in fulfillment of the words of the Lord's prayer, "Thy Kingdom come on earth as it is in heaven." Then the really bad are dead, dead, dead; as the best is dead.

When the day is over, more than a thousand people have stood with heads bowed to worship God, yet many seeing the Deity from different viewpoints. There may be danger in man's proclaiming a doctrine simply because it appeals to him. He may be moved by impulse and yet not guided by truth.

But, after all, the spirit of God is abroad in the land, and whatever pessimists may say, man is rapidly advancing toward the mark of the high calling—the worship of God and fellowship of man.

DR. LAUGHINGHOUSE'S SPEECH

Dr. Charles O.H. Laughinghouse, of Greenville, was in Williamston last week and addressed a small group of men most splendidly on North Carolina's resources. The address went so near the root of the subject that it might well be called a base-rock speech.

Of course, he calls the boys and girls our principal resources, and his speech dealt with what to do with our resources, which has become the great part of all problems that we have to grapple with since the large number of avenues of pleasure and opportunities have been placed before us in this day.

We can not change the condition of things nor can we change the nature of youth. We all have the same impulses, the same general inclinations. We meet the great flood tides of destruction all along the way; then it is when the force of proper care and training is most needed. The impressions of higher life, the sacredness of life itself, and the fact that every generation is charged with the improvement of the world, to make it at least one degree better than those coming after may have a better highway to happiness and prosperity than those who have already passed.

If they are to be what we would have them be, then we must teach them, which is the big job. Of course, they do not need too much religion, not enough to make them sad and solemn. They must have enough play and fun, just how much each individual needs is a perplexing question.

One thing, however, seems to be fully settled in the minds of all; the young man or woman who would fill the idea must have honor and truth and power to stand up for what is right, regardless of whatever may happen.

Some people say that in that period of time called "the good old days" when I was young and folks behaved themselves was a day when youth was fenced in. Now they say we have the no-fence law for our children. They, both big and little, may go wherever they please and associate with anybody, many miles away, perhaps with those as good as they themselves. No man can regulate the course of his own child in the open range. Nothing short of a collective movement by all fathers and mothers can combat the very serious condition which confronts us.

Then, we must furnish the right reading, the right fellowship, the right amusement.

The Y. M. C. A. has come nearer making men out of boys than any organization that we have given them so far, and the same thing applies to the Y. W. C. A. for young women. We need more of both.

Nitrate Applications Should Be Finished By June 1st

As a result of four years' experiments on cotton, the Mississippi (Delta) Experiment Station recommends as "the safest and most paying rate of application" from 150 to 200 pounds of Nitrate of Soda per acre. These results are so typical of the large majority of those secured with Nitrate at experiment stations throughout the South, that they are summarized here to show the 4-year average net profit from 5 different treatments, as follows:

Lbs. Nitrate of Soda Applied per Acre	4-Year Average Net Acre Profit
50	$10.73
100	15.92
150	26.19
200	30.10
250	33.67

The Station's results are interesting from another standpoint, for according to the Director of the Station they indicate that there is danger of applying Nitrate too late.

Thus, when the application is much over 100 pounds per acre, it is recommended that half be used at planting and half at the second cultivation, but, says Director Ayres, "Those who are not sure the fertilizer can be applied as a side dressing by the time the first squares appear should apply it all at or before planting."

This, of course, is true not simply of cotton but of many other crops as well. For example, Farm Agent H. H. Hester, Red River Parish, Louisiana, reports that demonstrations on sugarcane in which 200 pounds of Nitrate of Soda per acre were used gave exceptional yields despite a dry season. It was clearly shown by these tests that early applications of Nitrate "are essential to give full protection against a possible drought."

As a general rule, side dressings of Soda at the rate of 100 pounds per acre can be profitably made if the work can be finished by the first of June.

"ACHED & ACHED"

Lady Says Her Back "Hurt Night and Day"—Least Noise Upset Her. Better After Taking Cardui.

Winfield, Texas.—"My back hurt night and day," says Mrs. C. L. Mason, of R. F. D. 1, this place. "I ached and ached until I could hardly go. I felt weak and did not feel like doing anything. My work was a great burden to me. I just hated to do up the dishes, even. I was no-account and extremely nervous. My mother had taken Cardui and she thought it would do me good, so she told me to take it. My husband got me a bottle and I began on it. I began to improve at once. It was such a help that I continued it until after the baby's birth.

"I took eight bottles and I can certainly say that it helped me. It is a fine tonic. It built me up and seemed to strengthen me. I grow less nervous and began to sleep better. I can certainly recommend Cardui to expectant mothers, for to me it was a wonderful help. In every way I felt better after taking it and I think it is a splendid medicine."

Cardui is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. For sale everywhere. NC-168

AN IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT BY—

WILDACRES

Prices Advance April 20

At midnight, April 20, the introductory sale of property in the hotel section of Wildacres closes, and prices will advance on the remaining home sites. Introductory prices are from $750 to $2,000. Prices after April 20 will range from $1,000 to $2,500.

The response to the introductory sale of Wildacres has been very generous, but choice sites are still available. This announcement will quicken the existing activity. At the present rate of daily buying the homesites in this first section should be taken several days before April 20. It is, therefore, vital that you make no delay in making your selection. Call at the Wildacres office today.

CATCH THE SPIRIT OF THE WILDACRES IDEAL

One needs think but for a moment of the guiding motive of Thomas Dixon and his associates to realize what tremendous popularity Wildacres will enjoy and how thoroughly desirable it will be to own a home site or a home in the most unique mountain summer resort in America.

Those who have seen the inspiring beauty of the mountain country of Little Switzerland, North Carolina—where Wildacres is located—need no other inducements to own Wildacres property. Yet Wildacres offers more than beauty.

Here the Mount Mitchell Association of Arts and Sciences, headed by Mr. Dixon, and owners of Wildacres, is building a NEW NATIONAL INSTITUTION—A GREAT SUMMER ASSEMBLY OF THE LIBERAL ARTS, presenting a program of popular entertainment with addresses on the problems of modern life by leaders of thought in America and Europe.

The association is not speculating in land. It is creating a summer colony unequalled in the entire country with every facility for mental and physical stimulation.

- Property owners become members of ten clubs:
1. Driving and Riding Club.
 2. Fishing and Camp Club.
 3. Motor Boat and Canoe Club.
 4. Golf Club.
 5. Tennis Club.
 6. The Casino.
 7. Trap and Rifle Club.
 8. Drama and Music Club.
 9. Cinema Club.
 10. Liberal Arts Club.

The cash value of membership in these ten clubs is worth more than the price of any building lot.

Thus you have the ideal of Wildacres, becoming a reality, with supporting features as follows:

1. The location is in a strategic position in relation to population for a summer resort.
 2. Capital is protected, which means that Wildacres property can not be depreciated by undesirable development of contiguous territory. The topography of the country gives Wildacres complete mastery of its future and enhancement through its own forward development. The demand will always be progressively greater, and the supply, limited by nature, will diminish with every sale. Values must go up.
 3. The high reputation and the solid financial responsibility of the developers assure continued progress.
- These three features comprise the key to successful real-estate investment. Use them as a guide in your real-estate buying, and you insure your opportunities for certain profit.
