New Principle of Oiling Developed by Standard

An oiler oil which embodies an entirely new principle of lubrication has been developed by the Standard Oil company (New Jersey) after three years of long experimenting and exhaustive tests. It will be known as "Standard" Motor Oil, and is now available to motorists.

According to Mr. W. C. Teagle, president of the company, the new "Standard" Motor Oil solves the problem of spotty lubrication which has baffled engineers ever since the perfection of the internal combustion engine. It is an oil of greater oiliness, and possesses many advantages over the best of the old type oils.

"For years, engineers endeavored to find an oil," stated Mr. Teagle, "that would cling to metal surfaces so thoroughly as to abolish the areas of partial lubrication—the dry spots which permit that grinding of metal upon metal, and which result in scoring of cylinder walls, lead to dilution and other factors destructive to lubrication."

"Such an oil must not be of too heavy a grade. It must be, in fact, an oil of greater oiliness. And that is exactly what this new 'Standard' Motor Oil is."

"Because of its greater oiliness and its ability to 'stay put', the new 'Standard' Motor Oil establishes a new principle of lubrication, thereby giving it many advantages over even

Old Remedy Has Interesting History

Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh made Since 1846

In the early 1800's, an old English doctor secured good results with a liniment. He gave the prescription for this liniment to Mr. G. C. Hanford's grandfather in return for favors done him.

Mr. Hanford's father began the manufacture of this remarkable antiseptic liniment in 1846 at Groton, N. Y. It was first sold in a small way in Central New York and Pennsylvania. The demand for it increased as one customer recommended it to another, until its use is now tremendously widespread.

This wonderful cleansing, healing liniment has almost eighty years of continuous service to mankind behind it. Sold at your drug store.

the best of the old type oils. The new oil provides a constant lubrication film on the metal surfaces. It permits frictionless operation, in a practical sense, even upon starting a motor after idleness.

"There is less 'breaking down' under load or at high speed. The new oil makes hill climbing easier, gives smoother operation in high gear at low speeds, saves gasoline with or without carburetor adjustment."

"Besides, the new oil is low-carbon forming and tends to soften and clean out from the cylinder walls, piston-heads and spark-plugs some of the carbon already formed."

Tested Year in Own Cars

"The Standard Oil company (New Jersey) worked several years to perfect this new oil. Even then, after conducting more than a hundred exhaustive tests, the company decided not to offer it to the public until we had given the new oil a thorough trial of twelve months in our own fleet of cars and trucks."

"These were gruelling tests under every day driving conditions, yet this new motor oil brought an increase in gas mileage as high as 12 percent. It gave an increase in power of from 3 to 10 percent. Oil mileage was better by 8 to 35 percent."

"In all these tests, the motor ran cooler with the new oil. There was less crank case dilution. Carburetors could be adjusted for leaner mixtures and many of the men reported they could actually 'feel the difference' while driving."

Extensive preparations have been made by the Standard Oil company to have the new motor oil available on and after July 15th. Special attention has been given to both city and rural distribution in order that every section may have the new oil at the same time.

During the past several weeks, the Standard refineries located at Jersey City, N. J., Bayonne, N. J., Baltimore and Parkersburg, W. Va., have been running to capacity meeting the distribution demands. "Standard" service stations and dealers have been stocking the new oil as fast as they can obtain it.
