

G. W. Blount's Is Good Store

In Business Here for More Than Quarter Century

G. W. Blount & Co., one of the oldest mercantile establishments in Martin County, is outstanding in many ways. During the more than twenty-five years it has been in business here this firm, by careful and painstaking efforts, fair and square business dealings, and a habit of looking at things from the customer's viewpoint, has a well-earned reputation for above-board business methods that only such things can obtain. That the buying public appreciates their efforts is proved by the fact that many of their customers today are people who have been dealing with them for the past many years.

The owners, Messrs. G. W. Blount and E. P. Cunningham, are reckoned two of the most able business men of this section; they are leaders in church circles, a religious, social, and prominent in all the commercial, social, and religious affairs of the community. No movement that is of a worthy nature is allowed to pass, and this concern is a loyal supporter of the chamber of commerce.

New shipments of goods are constantly being received, and you'll find at their store the many articles that go to make the interior of a home.

WILLIAMSTON TO NORFOLK BY BOAT

(Continued from the first page) no longer see the mass of trees where Rea's Beach resort once stood, we had the feeling that the keeper of the drawbridge had opened the gates and we were then in a new world. Surely—the ship's good captain thought we were in a new world, for we asked more questions than there were curves in the Roanoke. We asked him what light that was, what it meant when it blinked a few seconds and then would relight itself. We troubled him for information about this river and that river, about other boats we saw pass, the direction we were then traveling and so on down the line.

Late evening found an undecipherable moon casting its soft beams on the ship and its all men. Seated in the deck chairs we could, it seemed, ride on forever and continued to enjoy such a surrounding. It was with reluctance that we accepted Captain Wise's invitation to retire and leave the moon to shine all alone. Once in our berths, we soon fell asleep, awakening next morning to find ourselves in the 64-mile canal, leading into Norfolk. It was a few minutes past five when breakfast was announced. We asked Captain Wise if it wasn't rather early start, but he said he wanted us to see all the sights. We appreciated this when we started passing through draw bridge after draw bridge, seeing trucks making their daily and early trips to the city. Large saw mills were scattered along the canal, and huge barges were busy taking the lumber from these mills. By the time we reached sight of Norfolk we were ashamed to ask further questions; as we looked with amazement at the sights seen as one enters Norfolk by the water route.

We docked at pier No. 1 of the Norfolk, Baltimore and Carolina Line a few minutes before seven o'clock, making the time for the trip about 19 hours. To say the least it was a wonderful trip and the hospitality accorded us by Captain Wise, Chief Engineer, C. B. Wise; C. C. Lyons, Assistant Engineer and Captain Ollie Harron, Mate, was the best imaginable. The Albemarle makes two trips each week, and Capt. Wise with his crew always call around to see their friends here.

During the past few weeks the boat has brought hundreds of Ford's to this section, besides large amounts of freight for this and neighboring towns. It is one of the many boats of the Norfolk, Baltimore, Carolina Line which operates between Baltimore, Norfolk and Eastern Carolina points.

We returned via Norfolk Southern and suffice it to say that made us value the boat trip all the more.

DOWN THE RIVER

This is not a clear picture, but it is supposed to represent one of the prettiest scenes on the Roanoke River. The picture was taken a few miles below Plymouth, where the river stretches out in a long graceful curve for more than a mile. The boat coming upstream is the Texaco oil tanker.

Booster Trips Meet With Great Success

The good-will tours of the Chamber of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club are meeting with great success, according to those attending Wednesday and yesterday.

The trip through the upper part of this county and a part of Halifax and extending over into Pitt was considered to be the best thing ever undertaken by local organizations in boosting the tobacco market and the Roanoke Fair.

Yesterday the boosters returned even more pleased, for they found real hospitality in real friends at Rich Square, where lunch was served them by Mayor Brown and his good people.

The boosters left on their last tour today, and although we have not heard from it, we can almost say that it has been like the others—a big success.

Florida Way of Buying Gasoline Comes Here

Down in Florida tourists would often drive up to a filling station, have their gas tanks filled and then drive off without paying. This method of getting gas struck here last Tuesday night when three negroes coming from across the river stopped at the bridge keepers house at the Roanoke river bridge and ordered eight gallons of gas and three quarts of oil. When Mr. Harris had filled the order and was putting his oil pot up when the negroes made their get away.

Mr. Harris as unable to read the number of the car as it was too dark and there was no rear light to aid him in so doing. He rushed to the telephone and tried to find the night policeman, but all the business firms had closed and it was impossible to get in touch with the officer.

Mr. Harris states the happening taught him a lesson, and his lesson should serve for others.

Margolis Bros. Modern Store

Entering their seventh year of business, Margolis Brothers have, during that time secured a reputation hard to beat when it comes to running a high class dry goods store. Foremost in their policies has been the handling of dependable merchandise, the kind that meets the needs and demands of the people of this entire section, and selling at prices agreeable to all. The commercial progress of a community is largely the personal history of the men living there, and surely it can be said that these brothers have lent ably to make our town witness the prosperity it has enjoyed during the past few years.

Handling the famous make of Society Brand clothes, this concern sells each year hundreds of suits of this make clothes.

Mr. Frank J.
