FELT STUPID, DULL

Mississippi Lady Says She Took Black-Draught for These Symptoms and Was "Greatly Relieved."

Starkville, Miss.—"I have been a sufferer of Black-Draught for about twenty years," says Mrs. C. E. Buntin, of R. F. D. 5, this city.

"I used Black-Draught first for constipation," continues Mrs. Buntin. "I would feel dull, stupid, and have severe headaches, even feverish. I had an uneasy, tight feeling in my stomach."

"I read quite a bit about Black-Draught. I began using it and soon my bowels acted regularly and I was greatly relieved. I used it every once in a while for about eighteen years."

"About two years ago I found I was having indigestion, a tight something in my chest, then severe pain, especially after eating sweets. I commenced taking just a pinch of Black-Draught after meals and by doing this I could eat about anything."

"I gave Black-Draught to my children for colds and headaches. I can certainly recommend it."

Theodore's Black-Draught is recommended by thousands of others for the relief of indigestion, biliousness, and simple ailments due to constipation. Safe, easy to take. Costs only 1 cent a dose. NC-171

THE VALUE OF PEANUTS WHEN PROPERLY HOUSED IN THE FALL

(By C. M. HURST)

TO THE PEANUT GROWERS: soil. The Hurst Peanut Digger is a Land Builder and Improver

I have a few words I would like to say to the public in regard to digging peanuts, as I have had several years experience in the new and old method of digging peanuts.

It is generally known when you dig peanuts the old way you rob your land of all the vegetation and the ammonia that forms on the roots, which is worth more to the land than the heavy growth of vines.

In the meantime, the vines are worth more for feed when you dig them with a digger than they are when you dig them by hand for this reason: When they are dug by hand all the tap roots, which form in a bunch, are right together and are taken out with the vines, and these roots, as a rule, are always full of dirt and is hard to get out, and consequently the dirt goes into the stack with the vines; and when you pick them with a picker or any other machine it makes mighty dirty feed for your team. But when dug with a digger they are clear of dirt and they make mighty good feed.

Peanut vines, when they are saved properly, makes a mighty good feed. They are strong, and your team will thrive on them without much corn.

Some people say peanuts don't pay—remember, when you have made your hay and don't have to buy it at a very high price you have made money.

Then you can fatten your hogs from the wasted peanuts that usually shatter off from digging.

These two items alone are worth money, not saying a word about the sale of your nuts, which usually run around one dollar per bushel as a money crop.

So, after all, a peanut crop, is a very profitable crop.

We will get back to the ammonia proposition, as I have seemed to left that point.

This is no guesswork or hearsay. I have seen what I am going to say with my natural eye and can prove every word by good, reputable men that saw the same thing; and that is in the value of ammonia that forms in the roots, which is hard to

In the fall of 1924 while I was testing my machine out as to its work, I used it at Mr. J. P. House's farm and dug several rows of peanuts on one edge of his pea field; and in 1925 he planted that field in cotton and saw the difference in the cotton growing and could not imagine what caused it. Finally it came to him that was where the peanut digger dug the 15 or 20 rows. You could tell to the row where it left off. The balance of the field was dug by hand. It looked like these few rows had a double application of fertilizer, and you could tell the difference after the stalks had been cut in the fall from the stubble.

I went out there especially to see it and could tell the difference.

I asked Mr. House what did he think was the inference in the yield of the cotton. He said he thought he would be safe to say 25 or 30 per cent more cotton was picked behind the digger than the old way of digging.

If that be true, we will figure it 25 per cent, the smallest estimate.

Mr. House usually makes a 500 lb. bale of cotton to the acre on an average. As a basis of a 500 lb. bale I figure he gained 125 pounds of lint cotton, which at the present price of 17 cents, basis of middling, he gained $21.25 per acre.

After all these advantages mentioned above we still have more by digging our peanuts with diggers: One man can take a good pair team and dig and shake out 6 to 8 acres per day very easy, and the work done by the machine will be much better than that done by hand, and a saving of 3 to 4 men. The average saving on labor alone would be $7 to $8 per day.

I can show other proof to the same effect. I was raised in the peanut belt. Seeing the need of a peanut digger, I undertook to build one and have been several years perfecting it. In the fall of 1925 I sold four that went through the season very satisfactorily; and this all I am offering 15 machines at a very low price of $135 cash.

This machine is built strong and heavy and will stand the hardship of handling the vines and hitches.

March 10th, 1921 and of record in the Martin County Public Registry in Book F-2 page 47.

This sale is made by reason of the failure of J. L. Wynn and wife Maggie Wynn, to pay off and discharge the indebtedness secured by said deed of trust to the North Carolina Joint Stock Land Bank of Durham.

In school or out... youth demands style

Some youth very dear to you is about to enter a new world. It may be the girl or boy who first proudly crosses the portals of high-school: it may be the new college man or woman, or perhaps the college graduate ready to share the burden of the world's work.

In any case, only one gift will suffice. For time has wisely approved the giving of a watch both to commemorate and make more efficient these all-important days.

Be sure, however, that the movement you select is fitted in a modern case, for youth and style go ever hand in hand. Our showing includes the newest creations by Wadsworth—the acknowledged style leaders in the dress of fine watches.
