SCHOOLS AND TEACHERS MUST HAVE SUPPORT

We have schools for the public good today, but mainly for the good of tomorrow.

The public school would do more good if all the people would properly contribute to it. We pay the bills to maintain it, and there most of us stop. We fail to put our energies toward making it function according to our ideals. We want perfect attendance, perfect lessons, and perfect deportment, yet we do not help to get them. We keep the pupils out of school frequently for the most trivial causes. We scold and refuse to help them when they need help and encouragement in the preparation of lessons. We set them bad examples in deportment. We rave against taxes that support trustees that organize the machinery, teachers that lead them, and then against the child itself because it fails.

After looking the field over, the school does well with the average child when you look and listen to the average father and mother, whose duty it is to help in every way to make the entire system a success.

We need not expect a perfect school without the universal support of all the people whom it serves. We may as well expect a steam engine to work without fuel as to expect a school to properly function without the support of all the citizens around it.

The boys and girls of Williamston, if they maintain the opening day's average, will attend school 64,480 days. That many days of good work will count for something in the future for them and for the section in which they live, but if those days are jilted away it will be a great waste of energy, and they will occupy a lower strata in the plane of life.

PROSPERITY CAN BE A BLESSING OR A CURSE

The gleam of prosperity which we can discern in the high prices of tobacco will help us if we really want to be helped, though it may prove a curse unless we use it wisely. In this day, there are numbers of ways to spend money; so many, in fact, that it is almost impossible to miss them

THREE OPINIONS OF THE "COUNTRY BUYER"

The "country buyer" seems to be spreading out everywhere.

It would be well to think for a moment what actually constitutes a "country buyer."

First, there are a certain class of farmers who think a "country buyer" is a man with a large quantity of money and very little brains who is calling around to pay more for their crop than it is worth, and in addition to losing actual cash money is willing and able to go to much trouble in hauling and grading and selling their tobacco for them. Some people say that all such farmers should be placed in an insane asylum.

Then we find a class of folks who all and have a little left for a rainy day.

This year brings many people the golden opportunity to show their honesty. There are, as is well known, thousands of good honest people who have owed money during the last few years, who were entirely helpless in the way of paying their debts. Those that honestly strived should not be blamed. Now, some of them at last are able to pay their debts. If they "come across" promptly the world will know they are honest and square.

Suppose they want something for themselves worse than they want to pay the honest debts they owe. What will the neighbors and the world say about that fellow who can pay and will not.

Yet there seems to be a few just such fellows. It is such people who make credit hard to get.

If all our people are to be judged by a correct rule, those in debt who can't pay will not be called bad, but all those who can pay and will not will not be called good.

the "country buyer" fellows comes along they proceed to sell him something for much more than it is worth. One man recently said such people should be sent to a feeble-minded school.

The third class of people regard the "country buyer" as a great human blessing because he comes along and takes their crops off their hands and saves them the trouble of grading and handling the crop, enabling them to buy a car this week so they will not have to wait until next week and gives them an opportunity to spend all their money quickly and go fishing. One cruel fellow says that people of this type should be sent to prison for laziness.

We are not responsible for the truth of any of the above answers. But one thing is certain—No man is going out to buy the farmers' crops for any purpose except to make big money.
