Address all communications to The Enterprise

We all seem to love royalty or we are generous in our entertainment of strangers, judging from the gorgeous reception we are extending Queen Marie, of Roumania. It is after all the proper thing to be generous and kind to all guests, whether they be kings, queens, or peasants. And while we are honoring the crowned heads of that little country, we are establishing a closer friendship with her people.

GOOD TIMES VS. BAD TIMES

We seem to have a hung jury on the case of Good Times vs. Bad Times.

Coolidge and his Congress have plead their good times case at great length. They have spread propaganda until every man has heard their cry of good times. On the other hand, there goes up the cry that times are tight and people can not meet their bills and are having to be closed out.

So the members of the great public jury are still pondering the case and are unable to agree on a verdict. Mr. Ford, Mr. Edison, Mr. General Motors, Mr. Railroad, Mr. Fertilizer, Mr. General Electric, Mr. Coca-Cola, Mr. Shoemaker all contend that times are good, and very good, which they claim they are proving by Mr. Standard Oil. They swear times are good and that they will never give up.

Mr. Cotton Grower, Mr. Haymaker, Mr. Corn Planter, and a hundred million other jurors say they have a hard time paying taxes and rent and buy their children bread, and that they know times are hard. They argue that there is plenty and to spare, that with equal opportunities to all and governmental burdens evenly distributed, there would be no ground for disagreement. They say that the few big fellows have got too much good times, and they have too much of the bad times. That only a few folks have got 90 per cent of the wealth and a lot of folks have only 10 per cent of the wealth.

The country can not be happy when a few folks rule all the wealth. Our laws make it possible to form great monopolies; those owning them think we have good times. The monopolized know we have hard times.

RUN FOR SAFETY

The danger zone used to be confined to the battlefield, powder houses and battleships. Now, it has moved from these and is found on the highways. Once you get tired of running for your life, just join the army, navy, or see the manager of the powder house—you'll find it all peaceful, and the danger connected is negligible.

With the number of drunks driving automobiles on the highways of North Carolina, one might just as well go into battle, for there at least the danger is confined to certain areas. On the highway it is different; you might get run over two miles from here or it might be two hundred miles from here. The number trying to mix the two fluids, gasoline and liquor, is ever increasing. The laws, while they have been of great aid, have not made for an ideal situation. With this ever-increasing number of drunks, the only thing left to do is to take your hat and run for shelter. All this talk about removing roadside signs should be hushed until the roads themselves are cleared of a danger far more serious than the signs can ever hope to be.

ELECTION TIME

The election to be held all over the country next week will be an attraction to thousands of American citizens. Some will be hotly contested, while others will pass with little attention paid them.

The methods of voting have been of great concern. Learned men have failed to invent a system by which "honest" voting may result. Too many conclusions are drawn in as many cases, too many outcomes are disputed, and should there be a close election and one conducted honestly throughout, the defeated party always with apparent ease finds some cause to object. But in spite of all, we, as American citizens, should take it upon ourselves to visit the polls on election day and cast a vote.

No matter what the issue is at election, whether it be for prohibition, against prohibition, or what not, voting is the basis and life of our gov-

Things To Think About

By JAMES D. TAYLOR

STORMS OF LIFE

A little more than 30 years ago a group of enthusiasts decided to build a handsome resort hotel near the sea in the State where I now reside.

We are told that they were warned by the older settlers not to build so near the sea. For a long time no great storm had visited that beautiful beach, and the group of enthusiasts could not see any danger. So the hotel was erected. They did not heed the warning.

The following summer a great storm came. Such a storm! The winds blew and mountains of water fell upon the beautiful hotel, and the morning found its wreckage. The foundation was not strong enough to stand the storm.

So it is with the game of life. In the building of human foundations the danger ground should be avoided. This life is so full of storms. Each day we are building a stronger or weaker foundation. So often we go rushing madly about each day not thinking or preparing for that storm that may yet come. What a pity it is.

There is nothing to worry about tomorrow if each day we try to make the walls just a little stronger. There will be the little storms in life, but if we have been building according to the rules of the Master Builder, just a little talk and a little walk with Him will quickly extinguish the marks of the storm.

ment, and we should look on the every vote cast as an addition to a bigger and better foundation of American government.

Success With Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh

Elmira, New York. I want you to know that my family has had real proof of the merits of Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. A sprained ankle, a badly burned face, caused by a gasoline explosion, and bruises from a ten-foot fall, have left no ill effects and I lay all the credit to Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh. No druggist could sell me any other liniment and I wouldn't be without it.

LOUIS E. TRIPP.

Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh is a rubbing liniment and an antiseptic for cuts, burns, bruises and old sores. It is particularly recommended for hard cases and has had repeated success where other remedies have failed. Sold at drug stores.

of marked trees to a cypress, nearly the run of Conoho Creek; thence up the various courses of said creek to the first station; containing 462 acres, more or less.

This the 4th day of October, 1926.
