The Weather and Church-Goers

The weather has more effect on church goers than anything else. Any temperature from 5 to 100 degrees is fine for an auto spin. A snow storm can't run an evening dress off of a ballroom floor. July sun is not too hot for the three-quarters-naked beach bathers. At church it is different. The temperature must be even, neither cold nor hot, light enough but not too light. The folks want the church to be just about like heaven. The demand for such a condition in the church home is not unreasonable, and the ideal should be met as near as possible. However, there is no special reason why a church-goer should suffer worse from cold weather going to the church than to the theater. It may be that the temperature that is so repulsive, after all, is the cold hearts of the church people. There may not always be enough of the spirit of friendliness and love. Church folks may be too cold and stiff to produce a pleasing atmosphere to the passing stranger. It will not be colder at church than at other places when we have the same spirit of interest. The preacher can't do it all, the choir can't do it all. That broad mantle of brotherly love and friendship must charge the whole church atmosphere.

14,000,000 Plans for Aid of Cotton Farmers

Of all the plans presented for raising the price of cotton, none of them have gone into effect yet. Perhaps we have too many plans. It is said that half the farmers have a plan; that every banker, half the merchants, lawyers and doctors each have some definite successful plan to make some substantial advance in the price of cotton.

What the farmer and all the other people need is put some of these excellent plans into operation, so that they can pay their debts, where they

Taking the Bridle Off the Child

Mrs. Helen Ferris, editor of the "American Girl," of New York, says children are permitted to exercise their own opinions much more than they were only a decade ago. They are now largely permitted to select their own hats and shoes and other apparel, as well as their books, papers, etc. The child is more capable of selecting an article or a friend than the father or mother, then it is well that they be permitted to do so. On the other hand, the experience of the mother and father should be used to serve the son and daughter.

The mother who does not know more about the comfort, value, and decency of a hat, shoe, or dress than

PALE & PEAKED

Texas Lady Was Advised by Her Mother To Take Cardui, Which She Did With Good Results.

Hamilton, Texas.—Mrs. Gladys Pottorvint, of this city, says: "At times I suffered awfully with pains across my back and through my sides. I would have to go to bed and stay two or three days at a time. It was very worrisome. I managed to keep going, but ... did not enjoy myself at all. "One day my mother remarked on how pale and peaked, why don't you take a bottle of Cardui? She had taken it herself a number of times, and it had always improved her health, so she thought I had better try it. "I got the Cardui and began taking it, and from the first dose or two I could see a change for the better. The first thing I noticed was that my appetite was improved. I began to be hungry and I enjoyed my meals. I slept better at night. My rest was so much quieter that I got the benefit from it. I kept on with the Cardui and took it for several months. The pains in my back and sides grew less until they finally quit bothering me. Try Cardui for your case. As all drug stores. NC-178 to help his son a little with the problems that nearly all boys face before they are men.

We are not so sure that it is not one of the greatest crimes of the age to turn the reins loose to the children and let them drive to their own death.

It is a cowardly admission of the parents to say the young inexperienced child is more capable to drift into the right channels of life than they are able to guide it by and through their own experience.

It seems as if Jones slacks the rein on his boy because Smith does his. Then Smith gives his boy another notch, only to be followed by Jones slacking up two notches. There seems to be a race on to see just how fast we can run this generation of children into the breakers of life. We have virtually taken the bridle off and shouted "go." And they are going—selecting for themselves things that are embarrassing whole family financial systems and placing the home in jeopardy, because they are racing in their selection of expensive things now used in daily events. A part of the cry of hard times comes from expensive and improper childish selections, or from a proud father and mother who are trying to let their children outdo their neighbors'.

A Revolting Spectacle

The trial of the accused in the Hall-Mills murder case has brought out some revolting things. It may be that there are and have been many just such love cases, and doubtless will be in the future, as was said to have existed between Rev. Hall and Mrs. Mills. Yet when we consider the peculiar surroundings and conditions in this case, where the telephone, the mails, and personal meetings existed for so long, when the very dearest and loveliest expressions passed between the preacher and singer by both lip and pen, the scene appears even more sad.

The folly of their improper love evidently led them to their death.

It may be that the jury will say not guilty. But one of the most sensational illegal love affairs to exist between man and woman has been exploited to the world, as well as one of the most horrifying tragedies recorded in our criminal procedures.

Observance of the marriage vows would have saved both the scandal and the death.
