

TOWN FATHERS HOLD REGULAR MEET MONDAY

The mayor expressed the hope that before the present town administration goes out of office it would have the various ordinances of the town revised and assembled and printed in pamphlet form, so that their successors would not have as a hard time finding out what the law was as they had. This idea was enthusiastically received, and the mayor was assigned the task of assembling and revising the ordinances.

Several other matters of little interest were discussed, a number of bills approved, and the board called it a day without the word "dance" even being mentioned, at least while the reporter was present, for the first time in many meetings.

People seldom improve when they have no model but themselves to copy after.—Oliver Goldsmith.
