Are We Willing for the World to Know Us?

Are we willing for the world to know us? is a question which we might find profit in studying.

Certainly, we can hide from our friends and from our enemies many of our deeds. But when it comes to God, it can not be done, because we stand before God's camera every minute of our lives. We can turn neither to the right nor to the left without making a perfect picture of the act for the use of the angels in the judgment. It is even so with the things we say. The record is made with such perfection that it will be sung for or against us in the judgment. Even our very thoughts are inscribed in the pages of the book of life and death.

It seems reasonable to think that many people do not seem to care what happens at and after death; they are apparently indifferent, doubtless because the date of the judgment is indefinite, and thought to be a long way off.

But the same folks that care least for the final judgment care most for the present judgment. They dodge from the true testimony of their lives worse than any other classes. They would not have the world know about their daily walk and talk for anything. They are always dodging a showdown and trying to shield themselves from the light.

How would we all feel tomorrow if we were called to march alone down the main street with all of our neighbors and friends lined up to testify of the things we have done and said and thought? Would we feel comfortable, or would we feel stubborn and sore because the record of our lives were opened to the world? Yet every man and every woman is expected to keep the laws of God, the country, and of social decency and modesty, that his or her record will stand the fiery test of truth on the daily balance sheet, when all the testimony is in. The folks who think they can break every law of decency, social, political, and religious, and go through the world with a bold front will certainly come to a place some day where the books are open and speak the truth. The witness may be the poor beast; it may be the poverty stricken person who has had to pay too much tribute; it may be the drunkard to whose lips you have pressed the cup; it may be the sons and the daughters whom we have failed to care for with the full measure of Christian leadership and advice.

One of the things we can never hope to escape is the witnesses. Those who know us best will doubtless tell the most, because they see and hear most.

It is strange that man will do his best to push the evil day off when it is his duty to meet it quickly and improve it. We should remember that "as we sow, so shall we reap, and we all know "the wages of sin is death." With such knowledge, why should we kick when the search light is turned on and the dark spots in our lives are bared to the human view. It is the unrighteous that fear the law. The righteous have no fear of the condemnation of the testimony. "Be sure your sins will find you out."

Things To Think About

By JAMES D. TAYLOR

GOING TO CHURCH

As I write this, I am in that section of the country where the water is unusually high. In a near-by State a call has been made for help. The levee gave way to the powerful water and caused a large number of people to seek dry land. The levee near where I now sit is expected to break. God grant that it may not. There were not as many people at church this morning as is usually the case, and it was said that many people stayed home fearing that at any hour their homes might be filled with water.

Did they help matters by not going to the house of God? Where can comfort and help be more readily obtained than in a house filled with those who come to offer thanks and ask for help? Many of those who did not attend church today will go to their regular place of business on tomorrow. There are very few things that keep people away from business. Yet the smallest things serves for an excuse to stay away from church on Sunday.

On the first day of the week, regardless of local conditions, let us say to ourselves and to those about us, "let us go into the House of the Lord." You will find comfort there, more than you would at home or any other place, if down deep in your heart you love Jesus and know that daily and hourly you need His presence.

"Ask the Saviour to help you, Comfort, strengthen and keep you, He is willing to aid you, He will carry you through."

Little drops of water; little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean and the wondrous land.

Good old farmer, working fast as he can go,
Hoping for good season, if God wills it so.

Plowing late and early, fixing up the dirt;
Old way are forgotten, they're playing safety first.

Working on the planter, sand all in their eyes,
Telling all the children, we'll have good things bye and bye.

Little wind and rain, mixed all up with hail,
If you're not protected, means another tale.

You don't have to worry, or get upon your feet,
If you want protection, simply 'phone to PETE.
