

Season's First Cotton Report Shows Decrease

According to the North Carolina indications, the stand is estimated at 87 percent as compared with 70 percent reported for the same time last year. The average date of first blossoms is estimated to be July 6th as compared with the 11th last year. Of course, the earliest blooms begin in the southeastern counties, centering around Bladen, where a date of June 30th was given for their first blossoms. The poorest stand appears to be in this same southeastern area where 83 percent is reported.

Boll weevil infestation appears to be much more general and intensive than for several years. This is indicated by the reported average of 20 percent of complete infestation over the State's entire cotton area. In as much as Entomologists advocate dusting when 15 percent infestation occurs, this indicates a serious situation. Many areas report squares dropping off profusely, with others claiming that the drop is due to boll weevil damage. County agents report that considerable interest is manifested, looking to dusting this year. From Scotland to Onslow, including from Harnett to Brunswick, the farmers report a 34 percent infestation. The damage also seems to be rather heavy all along the Southern border to Hoke county.

The most frequent comments from over 267 cotton farmers are: "Cool nights holding back cotton growth"; "Too much rain" has also been harmful by encouraging boll weevils and grasshoppers; reports are profuse indicating "backwardness and small plants". Most farmers indicate that there are either no boll weevils this year or that it is too early for them to be noticed. Lice damage, due to wet weather, is serious from Union to Beaufort counties. The crop is in fairly good condition so far as cultivation and healthfulness is concerned. Prospects appear to be good. The early dry conditions permitted the roots to get a good hold, deep into the soil. Fertilization has been heavy, but top dressing will be reduced.

INSTALL 200 ELECTRIC COOLERS FOR WORKMEN

Electric water coolers are being installed in the Homestead works of the Carnegie Steel Co. to provide drinking water for the concern's 12,000 employees. The company recently announced placing of a contract with Frigidaire Corporation, subsidiary of General Motors, for 200 electric coolers to be installed at once.

Efficiency tests made by engineers of the steel company disclosed that electric coolers afford constant temperatures, adjustable to any degree, furnish safer and better drinking water for men toiling in intense heat, and in addition, permit the company to effect a saving in ice bills and serving costs of $40,000 a year. The expected annual saving, according to the announcement, will total more than one-third the installation cost.

Workmen came from long distances during these tests to get a drink from the electric coolers, proving even better than engineers' figures the superiority of this type of water cooling, according to the announcement. The Homestead steel works expects to install electric refrigeration in its restaurants and other places and do away with ice entirely, it is said.

Electric water coolers were added to the Frigidaire line a few months ago. Five types of coolers, suitable for use in public buildings, offices, industrial plants, hotels, theaters, and the like are being built from a standard Frigidaire design, in which only mass production parts are used, together with a few simple accessories.

My Commission expires February 10, 1928.

Corrected—Attest: F. L. HAISLIP, W. S. RHODES, Directors.

"The Frigidaire water cooler may be attached to the city water system or used with the ordinary water bottle," says Oscar Anderson, local Frigidaire representative. "It is exceedingly compact and designed to look well wherever placed."
"Inconvenience of outside ice supply, which has been to a considerable degree responsible for the unparalleled growth of Frigidaire, is as marked in water-cooling equipment as it is in any place else. The new cooler leaves nothing to chance or outside influence and assures plenty of cold drinking water at all times."

DAZZLING HEIGHTS FAIL TO WORRY YOUNG AERIALIST

"As daring as she is pretty," is the verdict of public opinion, expressed wherever Mlle. Florentine has thrilled crowds with her reckless feats in her lofty trapeze. Mlle. Florentine is to be one of the features of the big fair to be staged here the week of September 27th by the Roanoke Fair Association, on the fair grounds. She is a member of the Nat Reiss Shows, engaged to furnish one of the amusement features of the free acts program, and she is said to be one of the most interesting members of the large family of entertainers that travel with that big amusement organization.
