

WHY ROME WENT THROUGH FILLING STATION WINDOW

It is an admitted fact that Rome Biggs came through the window at the Central Filling Station Wednesday morning when John Pope led him to believe that feminine motorists had driven under the filling station for gas. Rome, in a hurry, entered the wrong rest room at the filling station, and the error was played to an advantage by Mr. Pope and filling-station employees.

Rome was quick in his work, for he pulled the stick from the curtain, propped the small window open, and made his escape as a dozen or more men watched him from across the street.

Rome said he would deny it but the witnesses were too many.
